K: Anatol!

D: Yes, Henry, how are you?

K: How are you?

D: Thank you very much.

K: I sent you over that list just in case Le Duc Tho--

D: He just arrived in Moscow.

K: Just crying on your shoulders, huh?

[Laughter]

D: I'm sure he will. Well, he's here. Next time I will wait until you go to Moscow. I will show to Moscow how he does the, really, talks to you.

K: Oh, Le Duc Tho---

D: Okay, when he arrive in Moscow. I will come and tell & show the Moscow/to him how nice ^{realism} he is and so on, then I think he will watch with you then his realism, (laughter) and he will change his command I'm sure (laughter) you understand the background?

K: Yes I understand it very well, very well.

D: Or maybe he will be hearing some music with some members of the government and so in that way confident situation of this particular realism (laughter).

K: Look, I will send it to you--are you going to be in another hour, we are retyping it.

D: Okay, I will be here another hour, yes.

K: Good, by 7:00 you'll have it.

D: That's all right.

K: That way, they can have it tomorrow morning.

D: Yeah, tomorrow morning. Well, thank you very much, Henry.

K: Okay, Anatol, and I'll see you tomorrow morning for breakfast.

D: Yes, 8:30.

K: In the Map Room.

D: For breakfast, or how, or sometime they call it---

K: I wouldn't have you come here as a member of the Central Committee for a prayer meeting.

D: Well, I don't know, maybe it would be interesting your kind of prayer, because I'm sure you have not heard those prayers, maybe an international prayer or many things.

K: Well, we can try it to see whether we can agree.

D: Will you prepare the third draft please, for tomorrow

K: Okay, bye.

D: Bye, bye, thank you.
