

LOW ALTITUDE RECONNAISSANCE EXPLOITATION

HIGH ALTITUDE RECONNAISSANCE EXPLOITATION

APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS

APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS	APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS
APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS	APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS
APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS	APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS
APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS	APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS

APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS

APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS	APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS
APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS	APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS
APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS	APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS
APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS	APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS

APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS

APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS	APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS
APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS	APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS
APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS	APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS
APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS	APC EXPLOITATION REQUIREMENTS

Three large, mechanical image processing machines on a desk, used for low altitude reconnaissance exploitation. Each machine has a large horizontal tray for film or paper and various rollers and gears. A chair is positioned in front of the desk.

A large, vertical display board or stand holding several aerial photographs and maps, used for high altitude reconnaissance exploitation. The board is white and has a large, central panel for the main display.

Two more large, mechanical image processing machines on a desk, used for high altitude reconnaissance exploitation. These machines are similar in design to the ones on the left, with large horizontal trays and mechanical components. A desk and a tall, rectangular cabinet are also visible in this area.

Inside the National Photographic Interpretation Center, Washington D.C., 1962.

“Crate-ology”: Photographs of crates assessed by NPIC as holding Komar guided-missile patrol boats on their way to Cuba, September 1962.

Briefing version of the crate photograph with an image of a Komar boat superimposed.

KASIMOV WITH IL-28 FUSELAGE CRATES ENROUTE TO CUBA

28 SEPTEMBER 1962

More crates: Soviet ship Kasimov with IL-28 bomber fuselages on their way to Cuba, September 28, 1962.