

NATIONAL SECURITY AGENCY CENTRAL SECURITY SERVICE FORT GEORGE G. MEADE. MARYLAND 20755-6000

FOIA Case: 78137E 29 April 2016

JASON LEOPOLD 1669 BENEDICT CANYON DRIVE BEVERLY HILLS CA 90210

Dear Mr. Leopold:

This is the final response to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request of 30 May 2014, and addresses the specific items listed below:

- 3) any and all records about the NSA's "search" be it manual or electronic, for emails written/sent by Edward Snowden
- 4) any and all records that refer to the search for emails written/sent by Edward Snowden, in particular, a search for emails in which Mr. Snowden reported raised questions/concerns about certain NSA programs and operations and/or raised questions/concerns about the legality and/or illegality of certain NSA programs and operations;
- 7) any and all records about the type of search the NSA conducted in order to locate any emails written/sent by Edward Snowden;
- 17) any and all records that refers to discussions about emails written/sent by Edward Snowden, particularly emails in which Snowden reportedly raised questions/concerns about certain NSA programs and operations and/or raised questions/concerns about the legality and/or illegality of certain NSA programs and operations;
- 18) any and all emails that will show where the NSA searched to locate emails written/sent by Edward Snowden.

We have completed our search for records for these portions of your request. These five items of your request that are the subject of today's production significantly overlap; for this reason, we are unable to tie each responsive record to a particular item of your request. The records being produced today are responsive to more than one specific item.

Pursuant to agreement by both parties, NSA has taken steps to remove duplicated documents. First, we have removed exact duplicates of email strings provided by more than one person, as well as documents provided in one production release that are also related to categories of information being produced for a later production release. Once produced, the same document will not be reproduced. Furthermore, we are not producing partial strings of identical email chains when a complete string is produced. That is, if a chain of 20 emails is produced, NSA will not be producing as separate documents each of the 19 email chains that occur below the final email. Any emails containing new information or chains that have been altered are not limited in this manner and are produced as unique documents.

Due to a technical flaw in one of our operating systems, a few timestamps in the email headers within certain documents were unavoidably altered by the system during their processing for this case. Those timestamps are identified in reference stamps indicating duplicated text.

As a result of the Agency's review, certain information has been deleted from the enclosures.

Some of the information deleted from the documents was found to be currently and properly classified in accordance with Executive Order 13526. This information meets the criteria for classification as set forth in Subparagraph (c) of Section 1.4 and remains classified SECRET as provided in Section 1.2 of the Executive Order. The information is classified because its disclosure could reasonably be expected to cause serious damage to the national security. Because the information is currently and properly classified, it is exempt from disclosure pursuant to the first exemption of the FOIA (5 U.S.C. Section 552(b)(1)).

This Agency is authorized by various statutes to protect certain information concerning its activities. We have determined that such information exists in these documents. Accordingly, those portions are exempt from disclosure pursuant to the third exemption of the FOIA, which provides for the withholding of information specifically protected from disclosure by statute. The specific statute applicable in this case is Section 6, Public Law 86-36 (50 U.S. Code 3605).

In addition, some of the information has been deleted from the enclosures pursuant to the fifth exemption of the FOIA. This exemption applies to inter-agency or intra-agency memoranda or letters which would not be available by law to a party in litigation with the agency, protecting information that is normally privileged in the civil discovery context, such as information that is part of a predecisional deliberative process, attorney-client work product, and attorney-client privilege. Please note that the Agency has not redacted all information that constitutes predecisional deliberative process material, attorney-client work product, and attorney-client privilege. In accordance with FOIA guidance promulgated by the Attorney General on 19 March 2009, NSA has only withheld that predecisional deliberative process material, attorney-client work product, and attorney-client privilege information that would cause a foreseeable harm to the Agency's internal deliberative processes.

Personal information regarding individuals has also been deleted from the enclosures in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 552 (b)(6). This exemption protects from disclosure information that would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. In balancing the public interest for the information you request against the privacy interests involved, we have determined that the privacy interests sufficiently satisfy the requirements for the application of the (b)(6) exemption.

Finally, Exemption 7 of the FOIA protects from disclosure records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes. This includes information that, if released, could interfere with enforcement proceedings, or would reveal law enforcement techniques or procedures. The information withheld under (b)(7)(A) and (b)(7)(E) from the enclosures meets the threshold requirements for withholding under exemption 7 of the FOIA.

The Office of the Director of National Intelligence (ODNI) has asked that we protect information pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 552 (b)(3). Those deletions have been marked with the code OGA (Other Government Agency). Any appeal of the denial of that agency's information should be directed to ODNI.

Correspondence related to your request should include the case number assigned to your request, which is included at the top of each page of this letter. Because this FOIA request is the subject of litigation, please direct any related correspondence to the NSA's litigation counsel, Brigham Bowen, at the United States Department of Justice.

Sincerely,

JOHN R. CHAPMAN Chief, FOIA/PA Office

RE: Leopold v. NSA, No. 14-cv-919 (D.D.C.)

Dear Jeffrey:

In response to inquiries your client has made to NSA through public affairs channels, I relay the following from NSA, along with the attached three documents.

- 1. DOCID 4228926: this document was produced in the July 2015 production and, in fact, included in Plaintiff's article from August 19, 2015 entitled "NSA Finds New Snowden Emails- But They're Not About His 'Concerns' with Surveillance." One of Plaintiff's questions suggests he did not receive the document. For his convenience, we are providing another copy here.
- 2. DOCID 4301740: this is a reprocessed version of the document previously released as 4294915, with corrections on P. 7 and P. 15 corresponding to incorrectly-placed redaction boxes for text that overlapped with other records. The P. 7 correction addresses a problem correctly noted by the Plaintiff in the questions he recently sent regarding the April 2016 production.
- 3. DOCID 4301870 this is a reprocessed version of the document previously released as 4295018. The redactions have not changed. The only change is the text box on P. 5 showing that text is redacted because it overlapped with information from former 4294915, which is now 4301740 because of the reprocessing cited above.

Additionally, we offer the following explanation regarding 4294921. In the April 2016

NSA response, the Agency noted that due to a technical flaw in an operating system, some timestamps in email headers were unavoidably altered. Another artifact from this technical flaw is that the organizational designators for records from that system have been unavoidably altered to show the current organizations for the individuals in the To/From/CC lines of the header for the overall email, instead of the organizational designators correct at the time the email was sent.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

Brigham J. Bowen

(U //FOUO) Y ou asked whether NBC has filed a FOIA with NSA with regard to Mr. Snowden's communications with NSA.
(U/ /FOUO) I t has. Specifically, one was filed Monday via the FOIA page on the NSA public website by Matthew Cole of NBC News. It seeks:
"Any and all emails, documents or any other form of communication sent by or from EDWARD SNOWDEN to the Office of General Counsel, or equivalent, or to any lawyer or legal office within the agency during the years 2012 and 2013, as well as any communication in response to Mr. Snowden."
(U/ /FOUO) We have been in telephonic contact with Mr. Cole to confirm receipt of this request. We will follow up with written acknowledgement within a few days. The next step will be to task out a formal search for responsive documents. I am aware that one has been surfaced separately.

(U//FOUO)-This Thursday Vanity Fair plans to publish in its May issue a long anticipated article on the Edward Snowden case. DDIR Ledgett is among government officials interviewed for the article. The preview information is attached. NSA has not seen the full article and doesn't expect to before it is published.

(U//FOUO) The preview quotes Snowden responding to statements that he made no formal complaints about his concerns regarding NSA activities,

"The N.S.A. at this point not only knows I raised complaints, but there is evidence that I made my concerns known to the N.S.A.'s lawyers, because I did some of it through e-mail. I directly challenge the N.S.A. to deny that I contacted N.S.A. oversight and compliance bodies directly via e-mail and that I specifically expressed concerns about their suspect interpretation of the law, and I welcome members of Congress to request a written answer to this question [from the N.S.A.]."

"Every person remembers some moment in their life where they witnessed some injustice, big or small, and looked away, because the consequences of intervening seemed too intimidating," former National Security Agency contractor Edward Snowden tells Vanity Fair about his motivation for leaking tens of thousands of secret documents. "But there's a limit to the amount of incivility and inequality and inhumanity that each individual can tolerate. I crossed that line. And I'm no longer alone."

Snowden's extensive response is part of a 20,000-word narrative in Vanity Fair's May issue, by special correspondent Bryan Burrough and contributing editors Suzanna Andrews and Sarah Ellison. The article is the first comprehensive account—bolstered by interviews with dozens of key players—providing an inside look at how a geeky dropout from the Maryland suburbs found himself alone in a Hong Kong hotel room, releasing some of America's most carefully guarded secrets to the world.

Snowden writes to Vanity Fair about the N.S.A.'s allegations that he never filed a formal complaint (and directly challenges it to deny he contacted internal oversight); about why he's not a spy; about what he calls the "post-terror generation"'s views on defending the Constitution; about the crucial ways in which he differs from WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange; about his amusement at being labeled a right-winger; and more.

Among the highlights of Snowden's response:

Snowden challenges allegations that he never filed a formal complaint about the N.S.A. to internal oversight and compliance bodies: N.S.A. deputy director Rick Ledgett, who led the internal investigation of Snowden, claimed Snowden made no formal complaints. And if he complained personally to anyone, Ledgett tells Vanity Fair, he or she has not acknowledged it.

In response to this claim, Snowden replies, "The N.S.A. at this point not only knows I raised complaints, but that there is evidence that I made my concerns known to the N.S.A.'s lawyers, because I did some of it through e-mail. I directly challenge the N.S.A. to deny that I contacted N.S.A. oversight and compliance bodies directly via e-mail and that I specifically expressed concerns about their suspect interpretation of the law, and I welcome members of Congress to request a written answer to this question [from the N.S.A.]."

When asked about his initial reaction to the revelation that Snowden was the leak, Ledgett tells Vanity Fair there was a personal sense of betrayal, stating, "It was like getting kicked in the stomach."

On using his personal credit card in Hong Kong to prevent spy accusations: Snowden tells Vanity Fair that when he checked into the Mira, a hotel in Hong Kong's Kowloon district, he used his personal credit card so the government could immediately verify he was entirely self-financed, was independent, and had, over time, withdrawn enough financial resources to survive on his own without assistance. He writes, "My hope was that avoiding ambiguity would prevent spy accusations and create more room for reasonable debate. Unfortunately, a few of the less responsible members of Congress embraced the spy charges for political reasons, as they still do to this day. But I don't think it was a bad idea, because even if they won't say it in public, intelligence-community officials are regularly confirming to journalists off the record that they know with a certainty that I am not an agent of any foreign government."

On rumors concerning the number of documents he has: Snowden cautions about some of the numbers that investigators have publicized, especially the 1.7 million figure, which, he tells Vanity Fair, is "simply a scare number based on an intentionally crude metric: everything that I ever digitally interacted with in my career." He adds, "Look at the language officials use in sworn testimony about these records: 'could have,' 'may have,' 'potentially.' They're prevaricating. Every single one of those officials knows I don't have 1.7 million files, but what are they going to say? What senior official is going to go in front of Congress and say, 'We have no idea what he has, because the N.S.A.'s auditing of systems holding hundreds of millions of Americans' data is so negligent that any high-school dropout can walk out the door with it?'"

"I know exactly how many documents I have," Snowden continues. "Zero." But for the other players involved, "I'm not sure we'll ever know who has what," The Guardian's U.S. editor, Janine Gibson, says.

On what he calls the "post-terror generation's" views on defending the Constitution: "What we're seeing today in America is a new political movement that crosses party lines. This post-terror generation rejects the idea that we have to burn down our village in order to save it—that the only way to defend the Constitution is to tear it up."

On allegations that he has "a doomsday cache" in his possession: In response to whispers in the intelligence community that Snowden has "a doomsday cache" in his possession, Snowden retorts, "Who would set up a system that incentivizes others to kill them?"

On the crucial ways he differs from WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange: "We don't share identical politics. I am not anti-secrecy. I'm pro-accountability. I've made many statements indicating both the importance of secrecy and spying, and my support for the working-level people at the N.S.A. and other agencies. It's the senior officials you have to watch out for."

Why he admires WikiLeaks: "They run toward the risks everyone else runs away from. No other publisher in the world is prepared to commit to protecting sources—even other journalists' sources—the way WikiLeaks is."

On how he's amused by reports of his "right-wing politics" and would describe his political thought as "moderate": Snowden tells Vanity Fair he's amused by reports of his "right-wing politics, based on what seem to be Internet rumors and third-hand information." He continues, "I'd describe my political thought as moderate."

Sources close to the situation discuss Snowden's living arrangements in Moscow and his desire to be granted asylum in Germany or another democratic state: One source close to Snowden tells Vanity Fair that he and WikiLeaks staffer Sarah Harrison moved multiple times and at one point lived with an American family outside Moscow. Snowden and Harrision's time together "was a little bit of a love-hate thing," says a person close to WikiLeaks. "They were stuck in close quarters there for a long time." Snowden is fastidious and Harrison is not, this person says. Harrison moved to Berlin in November, but shortly before she did, a German politician had dinner with her and Snowden, who expressed a desire to be granted asylum in Germany or another democratic state. Mostly, the politician says, Snowden wished he could go home.

We have found a single instance of one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The question was received and an answer was provided to Mr. Snowden. There was not additional follow-up noted. There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for evidence of outreach from him in those areas and have not discovered any engagements related to his claims.

-- How do you plan to respond to the FOIA request?

We received the request from NBC and are following normal procedures for processing the request.

ADM Rogers, Rick, Corin, and
(U/ /FOUO) Since Brian Williams' interview with Mr. Snow the Freedom of Information Act from major media outlets activities during his period of association with the agency.	den ran last week, we have received a series of requests unde s seeking additional information about the latter's email
(U/ /FOUO) Many of these simply repeat NBC's request for respond by providing the requesters with the email releas	r correspondence between Mr. Snowden and OGC. We will ed publically last week.

All of Mr. Snowden's classified and unclassified email from either 2006 or 2009 to 2013;

(U//FOUO) However, we also have a separate set of requests which collectively are seeking the following:

- Information describing how NSA searched for purported emails which Mr. Snowden claims document his concerns about our operations and practices;
- Our exchanges with NBC News regarding Mr. Williams' interview with Mr. Snowden;
- Any and all media inquiries to us regarding purported emails involving Mr. Snowden and our responses to these inquires;
- Our exchanges on this matter with the SSCI and particularly Senator Feinstein;
- Our internal deliberations regarding the release of the email made public last week; and
- Talking points prepared in connection with that release.

DOCID: 4272122

Dave

(U/+COO) These requests were made by The Washington Post, al-Jazeera, Business Insider (a website specializing in business news which has run occasional stories on NSA), The Examiner (which I would characterize as a non-traditional "citizen media" site), and an independent journalist who has published in various outlets but most recently in The Guardian.

(U//FOUO) As requests for Mr. Snowden's emails more generally potentially involve information associated with an ongoing investigation, OGC and Security will be consulted regarding the appropriate course of action in responding to them.

(U//FOUO) I also will discuss with OGC how to address the requests enumerated in the above bullets. Responses to them would require considerable assistance from OGC, PAO, MLTF, LAO, and others. I do not expect a quick turnaround on any of the requests.

(U//FOUO) Separately, I regret that we have received some unfavorable media coverage (attached) regarding a series of internal emails released under FOIA last week dealing with our initial response last June to a surge of requests from individuals seeking records of NSA surveillance directed against them.

(U/FOUO) We GLOMAR (i.e. neither confirm nor deny we have such records) all such individual requests as to respond in one instance – say, to tell your typical law-abiding citizen that we understandably have no surveillance records on him or her -- would require us for reasons of equitable treatment to respond similarly in all cases and thus enable an actual or potential foreign intelligence target, i.e. a terrorist, to file a FOIA request and receive confirmation as to whether he or she is a subject of surveillance or has successfully evaded it. We now include this explanation in our GLOMAR response to individuals seeking records on themselves in order to provide them with the reasons for our position. However, by focusing on our internal back-and-forth as we worked through this issue – which also needed to be heavily redacted to protect classified information -- The Guardian does not report the outcome of that discussion, which was to provide the public more information in the form of a reasoned explanation of the rationale why we cannot be more forthcoming.

(U//FOUO) I wanted to provide you with a quick update regarding the actions we've taken today. An interagency decision was made to release the redacted email (attached) and the following press statement, both of which will be posted to IC ON THE RECORD and nsa.gov shortly.

BEGIN STATEMENT

NSA has now explained that they have found one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the Office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The e-mail did not raise allegations or concerns about wrongdoing or abuse, but posed a legal question that the Office of General Counsel addressed. There was not additional follow-up noted. The e-mail will be released later today.

There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for additional indications of outreach from him in those areas and to date have not discovered any engagements related to his claims.

(U/FOUO) I wanted to give you a quick perspective about actions following last night's NBC interview with Edward Snowden so that you and your leadership teams have information to share with your respective work force.

(U//FOUO) NSA was not made aware of this story by NBC until commercials began running late last week. NSA personnel were engaged through the weekend with the ODNI and the National Security Council Staff to see what we could learn about the focus of the planned program. We received a few fact-check inquiries from the network, but they provided no discernible insight and requests by us for more information went unanswered. The inquiries seemed more about solidifying their story, and given the lack of prior engagement with the government about the interview, an interagency decision was made to not comment prior to last night's airing.

(U//FOUO) As the story aired and overnight there has been an active dialog between and amongst multiple agencies, the National Security Council Staff and the ODNI Public Affairs. This morning we will be focused on a detailed fact-check of the transcript and interagency engagement about possible follow-ups today. Thus far, related media inquiries have been light, but we expect that may change later in the morning. One area of current focus is whether or not to rebut Snowden's claim, which he has made before, that he had expressed his concerns about NSA activity to officials on multiple occasions. A question and answer set on that issue will be developed today and various stakeholders—particularly the Department of Justice—will be consulted to determine the downstream implications of any actions in this regard.

(U//FOUO) We will endeavor to keep senior agency leadership informed on key developments.

Thank you, (U#FOUO)

Hello Ed,

Executive Orders (E.O.s) have the "force and effect of law." That said, you are correct that E.O.s cannot override a statute.

In general, DOD and ODNI regulations are afforded similar precedence though subject matter or date could result in one having precedence over another.

Please give me a call if you would like to discuss further.

Regards,

Message: Hello, I have a question regarding the mandatory USSID 18 training.

The training states the following:

(U) The Hierarchy of Governing Authorities and Documents is displayed from the highest authority to the lowest authority as follows:

U.S. Constitution
Federal Statutes/Presidential Executive Orders (EO)
Department of Defense (DoD) and Office of the Director of National Intelligence (ODNI) Regulations
NSA/CSS Directives and Policies
USSIDs
SID Management Directives and Policies
Office Policies

I'm not entirely certain, but this does not seem correct, as it seems to imply Executive Orders have the same precedence as law. My understanding is that EOs may be superseded by federal statute, but EOs may not override statute. Am I incorrect in this? Between EOs and laws, which have precedence?

Similarly, between DOD and ODNI regulations, which has greater precedence?

Could you please clarify?

Thank you very much,

Ed

I would also like a copy of the response he received, if any." This letter acknowledges that we have received your request and provides some administrative information. Your request has been assigned Case Number 78121. Due to a significant increase in the number of requests being received by this Agency, we are experiencing delays in processing. Dear Mr. Wiecek:

This responds to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request of 29 May 2014, which was received by this office on 30 May 2014, for "Any and all correspondence from Edward Snowden to any entity within the NSA in which he notes his concern about the scope and/or legality of a US surveillance program. There are no

Your request has been processed under the provisions of the FOIA. A thorough search of our files was conducted, but there are no documents indicating that Mr. Snowden contacted agency officials to raise concerns about NSA programs.

The Initial Denial Authority for NSA information is the Associate Director for Policy and Records, David J. Sherman. The fact that we were unable to locate records responsive to your request may be considered by you as an adverse determination, and you are hereby advised of this Agency's appeal procedures. Any person notified of an adverse determination may file an appeal to the NSA/CSS Freedom of Information Act Appeal Authority. The appeal must be postmarked no later than 60 calendar days after the date of the initial denial letter. The appeal shall be in writing addressed to the NSA/CSS FOIA Appeal Authority (DJ4), National Security Agency, 9800 Savage Road STE 6248, Fort George G. Meade, MD 20755-6248. To aid in processing the appeal, it should reference the inability of the Agency to locate the records you seek, in sufficient detail and particularity, and the grounds upon which you believe this Agency maintains such records. The NSA/CSS FOIA Appeal Authority will endeavor to respond to the appeal within 20 working days after receipt, absent unusual circumstances.

FOIA Case: 78121A

As you may be aware, one document was located that shows that Mr. Snowden raised questions about the agency's interpretation of NSA's legal authorities. Although it is not responsive to your request since it does not discuss NSA programs or raise concerns about NSA programs, we are providing the document to you as a courtesy as it was previously released. The document can also be found posted on the icontherecord.tumblr.com website, as well as on NSA.gov.

TO: Admiral Rogers

Sir,

BLUF: (U//FOUO) With specific regard to Mr. Snowden's repeated claims that he expressed his concerns about "clearly problematic programs to more than ten distinct officials," I, as the accountable NSA official for Media Disclosures issues, accept responsibility for the representation that the only engagement we have uncovered is a single web platform e-mail engagement with an attorney in the NSA Office of General Counsel. This is the same e-mail released in lightly redacted form on the heels of the recent NBC interview (See Attachment A below my signature block). I apologize that my failure to characterize that determination with full context, as I set out to do below, left NSA/CSS leadership insufficiently informed about this matter. It is my responsibility to keep NSA senior leadership informed about these developments as they occur and I will endeavor to correct for that going forward.

(C//NF) In short, there were three interactions between Mr. Snowden and either OGC or SV, only one of which involved a written question and answer. During the course of the investigation, standard interview questions were used, but were tailored as needed to follow the flow of the interview. It is also important to note that there were questions included that were meant to uncover whether Mr. Snowden was dissatisfied with the US government.

BACKGROUND

SV engagements resulted in the e-mail exchange with OGC that was released after the NBC story. None of the engagements expressed concerns about NSA programs or activities.

1. (C/NF) The contact initiated by Edward Snowden on 5 April 2013 about the hierarchy of authorities reflected on a slide in a training course was submitted to the NSA OGC via the "Email Us" form on their internal website. This form generated an email to an OGC alias and copied Snowden. This email was recovered by investigators from Snowden's email Inbox, and was marked as having been read but not forwarded or responded to. Because it was about an SV training course (OVSC1800 – Legal Compliance and Minimization Procedures), it was forwarded for action by the OGC to SV's lead for Access Oversight Training and Strategic Guidance. Although the individual in SV knew the correct response to the question, they determined that it would be best for the OGC to provide an authoritative response since the question raised a legal point. Snowden's e-mail was forwarded to OGC and the response was made for the record (See Attachment A). There was only one question asked and only one answer provided; the e-mails forwarded back and forth did not deal with the underlying question, but which organization would answer it.

(C//NF) We are aware of two other contacts by Snowden with SV:

- 2. (U//FOUO) In early April 2013 an individual who did not identify himself appeared at the desk of an employee in the SV training area. He asked if he could talk to someone about the OVSC1203 (FISA Amendment Act Section 702 training) course. In the words of the SV employee he seemed upset and proceeded to say that he had tried to take OVSC1203 and that he had failed. He then commented that he felt there were trick questions throughout the course content that made him fail. ((Note: SV Training has standard responses used to respond to questions like this.)) The SV employee introduced herself and informed him that the OVSC courses did not contain any trick questions and that all of the answers to the test questions could be located within the course content. She reminded him that the course is open book and not timed. He was told that students get multiple attempts to successfully pass the course and if he was not successful after multiple attempts, he would need to contact the office for further assistance. In the view of the SV employee he seemed to have calmed down by then and said he still thought the questions tricked the students, but he would try again. He departed the SV training area and to her knowledge did not address the issue with SV training again. This interaction did not involve concerns about NSA programs and activities.
- 3. (U//FOUG) While serving as a Systems Administrator with Dell in 2012, Edward Snowden assisted NSA Hawaii personnel with access to files related to a "FISA document template" process. Subsequent to that an SV employee at NSA Headquarters contacted Snowden to gain assistance in solving a similar problem. He addressed that support remotely from NSA Hawaii. This activity was within the routine duties performed by Mr. Snowden as part of his employer's contract with NSA.

(S//NF) Note: The same employee was involved in the first two engagements with SV. In response to the June 2013 Agency All (See Attachment B) she provided in writing her account of these engagements.

DETAILED CONTEXT

(U//FOUO) Through interviews, research and solicitations for information in support of investigative and other requirements we have accumulated a set of data which represents our best, most authoritative capture of encounters initiated by Edward Snowden which may have some bearing on the investigation, media disclosures and or his claims. We cannot affirm with 100% certainty that this is a complete set of information, that would

OUR INTEREST IN HIS ALLEGATIONS
(C/NF) From his first public claims (The Guardian, 10 June 2013) that he engaged off concerns, we have sought to account for any possible engagements. Our focus became mothe April to May 2014 timeframe Snowden's assertion in a Vanity Fair interview. In that interview he is quoted as saying: "The NSA at this point not only knows I raised complaints, but that there is evident concerns known to the NSA's lawyers, because I did some of it through e-mail. It is NSA to deny that I contacted NSA oversight and compliance bodies directly via especifically expressed concerns about their suspect interpretation of the law, and I Congress to request a written answer to this question [from the NSA]." Although we already had conducted a number of previous checks for responsive material, diligence we issued in April 2014 a task for an e-mail search by NTOC, OGC, the Inspect Oversight and Compliance and the Office of the Director of Compliance. Hello Ed,
Executive Orders (E.O.s) have the "force and effect of	law." That said, you are correct that E.O.s cannot override a statute.

In general, DOD and ODNI regulations are afforded similar precedence though subject matter or date could result in one having precedence over another.

Please give me a call if you would like to discuss further.

Message: Hello, I have a question regarding the mandatory USSID 18 training.

The training states the following:

(U) The Hierarchy of Governing Authorities and Documents is displayed from the highest authority to the lowest authority as follows:

U.S. Constitution

Federal Statutes/Presidential Executive Orders (EO)

Department of Defense (DoD) and Office of the Director of National Intelligence (ODNI) Regulations

NSA/CSS Directives and Policies

USSIDs

SID Management Directives and Policies

Office Policies

I'm not entirely certain, but this does not seem correct, as it seems to imply Executive Orders have the same precedence as law. My understanding is that EOs may be superseded by federal statute, but EOs may not override statute. Am I incorrect in this? Between EOs and laws, which have precedence?

Similarly, between DOD and ODNI regulations, which has greater precedence?

Could you please clarify?

Thank you very much,

Ed

Roj,

I don't know specifically, but I would expect it would authoritatively address things like:

What is the training and awareness provided to gov't and contractor employees about reporting activities they perceive to be inconsistent with law or ethics? What are the mechanisms by which that reporting can occur? What is the process, accountability for addressing such reports? Is there a record of these kinds of inquiries and responses? Do we have any examples of reported activity which resulted in corrective measures? Did we receive correspondence from Edward Snowden about his concerns? If so, in what form, on what dates and with what specificity as to content? Were his inquiries responded to? If so, how and when? How was our search for any correspondence from him conducted? Was it exhaustive and authoritative? Is it possible there is correspondence we overlooked, didn't record? (U//FOUO) Is it your recommendation that we do so in addition to the CN for the purposes of addressing a factual error published by Vanity Fair? Is so, I'd like to see the CN go first so we provide the Hill the courtesy of awareness. In the meantime you can run the necessary traps to clear language if we're satisfied that the e-mail searches have come up empty handed.

Let's be ready to be very public here. If his claims are factually incorrect and we do not have security concerns with the subject matter we should be very forthright in stating his claims are wrong and factually incorrect. I want us to do the coordination ASAP vice waiting for an article and then spending three weeks debating our way ahead.

Ah. Appreciate the clarification.

.rtf files aren't actually word docs, MS Word just has a default association to open them since they're universally readable. This is because Word is "greedy" by design in regards to file associations. To fix that:

- 1) Right click one of the .rtf files and hover over the "Open With" option
- 2) Click "Choose default program"
- 3) Select "Wordpad" from the list of programs, make sure the box in the bottom-left that says "Always use the selected program to open this kind of file" is checked, then click ok.
  - a. If "Wordpad" is not visible on the list, you'll have to click "Browse" and go to the location of the executable to find it. You can do a windows search for wordpad.exe, but it's probably in C:\Program Files\Windows NT\Accessories (named wordpad.exe) if NSAW is using a modern OS build.

Now you just have to double click (or however you prefer to open the files) and Windows will start the proper application automatically.

If you're still having trouble, please feel free to call me directly on the number below.

Thanks.

Thanks for reaching out. The folks generating these documents are st we suspect they may have missed a small but critical step in the procenot simply saving the document as a .rtf from within MS-Word).

The reason this works is because the links that you're having trouble viseems the embedded links and tries to "phone home." This by itself would not be a problem, since you're being sent the files directly, however, the program used by the analysts to generate these files (Microsoft Word) embeds a huge amount of hidden metadata into every file it creates. In this case, it's creating a "phone home" link that tells Word where to get a copy of the FISA document template that was used to create the file (this is really bad design on Microsoft's part, but in their defense they were probably assuming an open-sharing environment). That means when someone outside the enclave tries to open the document in Word, Word immediately detects the phone home link and tries to go get a copy of the document template (from the enclave it can't reach). It also won't let you do anything for roughly five minutes (more bad design) until it decides that the enclave is actually inaccessible, rather than temporarily non-responsive.

Normally, the simple fix to this would be "don't create the document from a Word document template," but since the analysts rely on macros embedded in the document template for a part of their production process (minimization), we have to go with a solution that allows them to use the macros, and then disassociate all of the "trash" metadata this generates from the produced content. That's why the .rtf (a universally readable format) file needs to be created outside of Word – non-Word programs don't understand all the phone-homing chicanery and simple omit that information from the finished file entirely. Creating the .rtf this way creates a file that you can still open in Word and won't phone home – which is our desired result. Conversely, if the .rtf file is saved within Word, you just get a universally readable file that still wants to phone home – this is what I suspect you were emailed.

However, opening those files in a program that is not Word will still ignore the "phone home" instruction, because only Word can understand that instruction. Other text editors will just ignore it, and allow you to open the file anyway.

I hope that fully answers your question. If you'd like any additional information, please feel free to contact me directly. Also, please let me know if you are or are not able to open the .rtf files in Wordpad (NOT/NOT Word) so I can factor that into any further troubleshooting.

Hi (b)(3)-P.L. 86-36
Summary:
The issue ended up being a process related issue caused by Word's handling of template & macro tracking. As I explained on the phone, in simple terms, there were basically "hidden" links in all of the documents your analysts v creating that were requiring anybody trying to open the files to be able to reach into the NSAH network. Not all off can do that, which caused the problems NSAW experienced.
We came up with a solution that would allow your folks to continue with their normal workflow (that utilizes local templates) while maintaining readability for external offices.
If you're interested in the specifics, they are included below. (b)(3)-P.L. 86-36
Problem:
The analysts generating the word documents use a special template that implements certain macros they rely on for FISA minimization process, but it creates a link (internal to the document file format) to that template's location and some other associated enclave content paths. Since those file locations are external users not can't view the document's content, but the peculiarities of Microsoft Word's startup process ensure that users can even "fail" to open the document until a 5 minute network timeout elapses.	id only
After those five minutes pass, you can use template tricks to fix the document, but this results in a poor user experi (and requires a key-management style template tracking process to make sure all recipients have the latest template so it was not recommended as a solution. Unfortunately, saving in a different format within Word (barring perhaps which strips formatting and is therefore undesirable) still preserves the template, and manually disassociating the template within word is a roughly "ten click" process, so analysts were having trouble coming up with a simple workaround.	te),
Solution:
Producers will continue to use Word for workflow, as this allows them to access their macros locally. Once the document is finalized, they'll save it into a universally readable, metadata free format that preserves formatting (suitf) through a product that does not support Word macros/templates (wordpad) to remove the enclave hardlinks. ensures any user anywhere will be able to read their reporting without the format quibbles.
Additionally, the Ctrl+A/Ctrl+C/Alt+Tab/Ctrl+V sequence was suggested as a simple "now" workflow solution. Long term, suggested they write a simple parser to rip the text content from .docs within their working folder and conve to a better format (rtf/txt/html/xml) programmatically, so the analysts don't have to consciously think about change the document format. Probably possible via a simple script.	ert it

(U//FQUO) I had two separate contacts with "the leaker" during the timeframe from 5 – 12 April 2013, one instance via email regarding the OVSC1800 course content and the ranking of the associated authority documents and one instance, in person, regarding the OVSC1203 course content. Details of each follow, as well as the individual emails.

1. (U//FOUO) OVSC1800 Issue regarding ranking of Authority Documents Used in Course Content

(U//FOUO) Initially 1 received an email which was forwarded to me from the OGC Office Manager on 5 April 2013. The email was sent to the OGC D2 alias and then forwarded to the SV training team via our training alias the same day. The individual was questioning the hierarchy of the authoritative documents, ranked by precedence, which are part

SimeTVSC1800*Course Content. Although I felt comfortable answering his question, I thought it was more appropriate for OSC to respond since the authority documents involve legalities and the individual wanted them ranked in precedence order. I spoke with	DOCTD: 4294841

The response closed any further action for SV Training.  2. {U/#F0U0}OVSC1203 Issue Regarding Course content and trick questions (b\0)P.L. 8536  (U/#F0U0}The individual appeared at the side of my desk in the SV training area during the timeframe between 5 – 12 April 2013, shortly after junch time. He did not introduce himself and instead asked if he could talk to someone about the OVSC1203 course. Lindicated that he could talk to me. He seemed upset and proceeded to say that he had failed. He had failed. He then commented that he felt we had trick questions throughout the course content that made him fail. SV Training has standard (canned) responses we use to respond to questions like this. Lintroduced myself and provided the information to him. My comments were standard and part of our "canned" responses, and informed him that the OVSC courses did not contain any trick questions and that all of the answers to the test questions could be located within the course content (our standard response when someone states they have failed any of our courses). Also, as part of our standard response with this type of question, we remind the students that the course is open book and not timed, also part of our routine canned response. I also reminded him that students receive multiple attempts to successfully pass the course and if they are not successful after mittiple attempts, he would need to contact us for further assistance. He seemed to have calmed down by then and said he still thought the questions tricked the students but he would try again. Apparently he didn't realize he had multiple attempts, he would need to contact with him, I immediately tried to pull his training again. When the Snowden had another interaction with the same SV woman, this one in person when he was here TDY. He stopped by her desk to complain about OVSC 1203 – the FAA 702 course. He said the test was too hard and had trick questions. He said he had failed it multiple times (I'd have to check with ADET on that). He did pass the course at some point.

- Taking OVSC 1203/1800 a month before his departure is not commensurate with being 'senior' in anything. More of the 'ink still drying' type of point in a career, regarding certifications to access FAA.
- Look at the signature block. System administrator. That is not a lowly or ignoble position, but it is not in line with the persona that he has painted as a 'senior' player.

(U//FOUO)-I think we (NSA) have a very interesting decision to potentially weigh in on – though the decision is probably that of DOJ. At what point do we stop focusing on muddying the waters of a potential prosecution, and start looking at how we can have an exceptionally strong retort – that has a half-life – and help restore our brand/help with hiring, at the expense of tainting the potential? Emotionally, we want justice. Empirically, I challenge whether if there is a trial, and if there is a conviction, that the net gain exceeds what we could do with this – the substantiation that his allegations are false, as is are his claims of his role here – in developing potentially powerful external communications to our net benefit. Something I've been impressed by is the enor on all of this – dispatches to the workforce that our heads are high, we're marching on, we will continue to aggressively develop.

ODOC reminded us of some other "interactions" with Snowden that may need to be consithis action (thank you).	dered for dug this one out of the SSCT files for usit displays 2-3 additional with the SV contingent that we need to considerbut they do not appear to have any "ala "concern" for illegal priquestionable activities on the part NSA.
They are:  n An email exchange circa APR 2013 when Snowden was with FHV, with NSAW SV regarding the legal hierarchy question from the OVSC1800 course that we eventually referred to the OGCand answered by (Provides more background on the "one" contact we accounted for in our work today)
A personal exchange circa APR 2013 with SV when Snowden appear desk with concerns about "trick questions" in the test for OVSC1203 being the reache failed the test. explained there are no trick questions, and that directly answers can be found verbatim in the course material. She also explained that he retake the testwhich appeared to calm his concerns.	son why y-related

n Email exchange circa 2012 while Snowden was a SysAdmin with Dell. He helped NSAH personnel regarding sysadmin support and access to particular files related to a "FISA"

MLTF does not see these as items that show his "concerns"but they do show interaction with the Compliance elements fo NSA, albeit administrative in nature.

ssct (ALIAS) S1  Subject: (U) Vanity Fair Article With Fugitive - May Cause Additional Work

Classification: TOP SECRET//SI//NOFORN

(U) Hello All, the much anticipated Vanity Fair article with the fugitive is out, please see attached. The article could cause additional work for us.

(U//FOUO) Probably the most concerning issue in the article is the fugitives assertion that he raised complaints with NSA lawyers and oversight and compliance personnel.

"At Kunia, Snowden would later claim in a statement to the European officials of his concerns about overreaching government surveillance, "none of whom took any action to address them," he wrote. "Everyone in the intelligence community is aware of what happens to people who report concerns about unlawful but authorized operations." But, according to Rick Ledgett, the N.S.A.'s deputy director who would lead the internal investigation of Snowden's leaks, Snowden made no formal complaints. And if he complained personally to anyone, Ledgett says, they have not acknowledged it.

The N.S.A. at this point not only knows I raised complaints, but that there is evidence that I made my concerns know to the N.S.A.'s lawyers, because I did some of it through e-mail. I directly challenge N.S.A. to deny that I contact N.S.A. oversight and compliance bodies directly via e-mail and that I specifically expressed concerns about their suspect interpretation of the law, and I welcome members of Congress to request a written answer to this question [from the N.S.A.]."

	(TS://SI://NF) The MLTF has already asked the IG, OGC, and ODOC, to search their official email, webbased contacts, and correspondence for any evidence that the fugitive contacted their office for any reason. If any evidence was found, they were requested to provide a short recap of the exchange. Two folks from SV responded that they had contact with the fugitives, see attached. One of their responses was classified TS://SI/ and th MLTF task was C://NF, which is why this paragraph is TS://SI//NF.

Given your engagement last night on this topic, the fact that the protagonist specifically pointed to e-mail's sent to the OGC and your expectations expressed in the note below I would encourage you to work with your staff to give yourself confidence that requests of your folks to check for records are/were sufficiently robust to underpin your personal level of confidence. I am not in any way suggesting that people did not take the requests seriously-they did, but they did so under time pressure.

Sir,

As requested, below is a transcript of the NBC program we obtained from the White House in support of attribution work. Since it was not acquired for a fee we're meant to limit our use. I believe it was generated off a CLOSED CAPTIONING system so there are a few text garbles. In response to a request we received <30 minutes ago, Media Leaks Public Affairs and OGC are at this time preparing information for the White House press office in support of the daily press engagement by Jay Carney at 12:30 EST. Specifically answers to two question:

- --Did Snowden raise concerns with NSA as he said he did?
- -- How do you plan to respond to the FOIA request?

The FOIA request reference is highlighted in the transcript below. We do not know if the White House plans to present this information proactively or have it in reserve if they receive a specific question. We will make certain you receive what is sent to the White House.

Please advise if you have any questions/concerns.

Respectfully,

BEGIN	TRANSCRIPT

BRIAN WILLIAMS; good evening, i'm brian williams, he is routinely called the most wanted man in the world, last week in moscow, cloaked in secrecy and after months of behind-the-scenes back and forth, we sat down with edward snowden for his first american television interview, let's begin with a reminder of what this 30-year-old has done and why he's living in exile overseas, wanted for espionage in this country, the classified documents he stole, downloaded from the nsa and handed over to journalists blew the lid off data mining programs that had been launched in the wake of and in the name of 9/11, they have names like prism and boundless informant and xkeyscore, some of them designed to vacuum up phone and internet data are from companies like verizon and google and apple and yahoo! and some of them could zero in on any one of us. snowden came to this interview armed with talking points, ready to tell his story. he knew he would be receiving no compensation and no question was off limits, already just today based on prereleased snippets of what you're about to see secretary of state john kerry launched a full-on fredricton it willontal assault on snowden calling him a traitor, challenging hill to come home to face justice, we'll hear what edward snowden has to say about that, he arrived alone carrying only a backpack into our moscow hotel, he came up a back stairway into the elevator, the moment he sat down and our camera focused on him, it became clear that this was the first good long look at him the world had had, we saw him framed against the hotel window in hong kong and appearing from undisclosed locations on closed circuit video, he was here now, introducing himself as ed. a lot of people say you have badly damaged your country.

EDWARD SNOWDEN: can you show that? is there any dman vagsemonstration? I have been asking for a year now. if after a year they can't show a single individual who has been harmed in any way by this reporting, is it really so grave? is it really so serious? can we really trust those claims without scrutinizing them? I would argue we can't, we should be open to them, it's fair, the possibility, if this has caused serious harm, I plirnlywould like to know about it.

WILLIAMS: keith alexander has said you have done, quote, significant and irreversible damage to the nation, he said there is, quote, concrete truth that terrorist groups and others are taking action and making changes and it's going to make our job tougher, and this amounts to telling our enemy our playbook.

SNOWDEN: so what's interesting is that we see the exact same language, the exact same accusations being levelled against whistleblowers, against any critic of any government program throughout history, throughout time.

WILLIAMS: what are you doing in russia?

SNOWDEN; all right, so this is a really fair concern, i personally am surprised that i ended up here, the reality is i never intended to end up in russia, i had a flight from cuba to latin america, the united states revoked my passport to trap me in the moscow airport, when people ask why are you in russia, i say please ask the state department.

WILLIAMS: the u.s. state department says snowden's passport was pulled before he boarded that flight to moscow and yet he was somehow still able to leave hong kong, a city he had chosen to fly to initially upon leaving the u.s. a formerly high ranking american official said if snowden's equivalent russian kid was in our hands in the united states we would be working mightily to, a, befriend him and, absent that, infiltrate what hes has, what he knows, what has your relationship been to the host nation? have you met putin? have you spoken with him?

SNOWDEN: I have no relationship with the russian government at all. I have never met the russian president. I'm not supported by the raugs government — russian government. I'm not taking money from the russian government. I'm not a spy. the best way to make sure, for example, the russians can't break my fingers and compromise information or hit me with a bag of money until I give them something was not to have it at all, the way to do it was by destroying material I was holding before I transited through russia.

WILLIAMS: people are going to find it hard to believe that president putin hasn't taken a run at you or what you know. you can state declaratively that that hasn't happened?

SNOWDEN: yeah. I mean, the way -- the way to think about this is, again, I already know how to deal with counterintelligence, beyond that, I took nothing to russia, so I could give them mothing.

WILLIAMS: you say you're not carrying around any of the materials, you are handing them off, if I gave you a laptop, could you access the documents?

SNOWDEN: no, no.

WILLIAMS: no, you couldn't remotely, electronically access material?

SNOWDEN: no.

WILLIAMS: it's gone from your control?

SNOWDEN: right, i don't have any control -- let's put it this way, if i'm traveling through russia -- and i know i'm traveling through russia and they have a very aggressive, very professional service, and i look like tweety bird to sylvester the cat, a little walking chicken leg with all the documents if i have control over that, that's a very dangerous thing for me.

WILLIAMS: we'll take our first break here, up next when we continue, the impact of 9/11 on edward snowden.

(COMMERCIAL BREAK)

WILLIAMS: going back almost a year to when this story first broke, edward snowden was defined early on, and not altogether accurately, the president famously called him a hacker, we in the news media passed along and repeated terms like systems analyst and outside contractor that didn't really mean all that much and according to snowden didn't really describe what he did for a living.

(VIDEO BEGINS)

WILLIAMS: how do you define yourself? are you — were you trained as a spy? specifically i'm talking about the titles systems analyst, contractor, it seems to me spies probably look a lot more like ed snowden and a lot less like james bond these days.

SNOWDEN: well, it's no secret that the u.s. tends to get more and better intelligence out of computers nowadays than they do out of people. I was trained as a spy in sort of the traditional sense of the word. I lived and worked undercover, overseas pretending to work in a job that i'm not and even being assigned a name that was not mine. now the government might deny these things, frame it in certain ways and say, oh, he's a low level analyst but what they are trying to do is they are trying to use one position that I have had in a career here or there to distract from the totality of my experience which is that I have worked for the central intelligence agency undercover overseas. I have worked for the national security agency undercover overseas, and I have worked for the defense intelligence agency as a lecturer at the joint counterintelligence training academy where I developed sources and methods for keeping our information and people secure in the most hostile and dangerous environments around the world with, so when they say I'm a low level systems administrator that I don't know what I'm talking about it's somewhat misleading.

WILLIAMS: snowden said his life changed when he was still a teenager on the worst day in modern american history.

what did 9/11 mean to you?

SNOWDEN: I have never told anybody this, no journalist, but I was on ft, meade on septembeth right outside the nsa, so I remember — I remember the tension on that day. I remember hearing on the radio. I remember thinking my grandfather who worked for the fbi at the time was in the pentagon when the plane hit it, I take the threat of terrorism seriously, I think we all do. I think it's really disingenuous for the government to invoke and sort of scandalize our memories, to sort of exploit the national trauma that we all suffered together and worked so hard to come through to yufjustify programs that are have never been shown to keep us safe but cost us liberties and freedoms that we don't need to give up, and our constitution says we should not give up.

WILLIAMS: then there is this way of looking at it — our nation had been attacked in this nonlinear way, we were hurting, post pearl harbor hurting, why not cast the widest net possible? innocent people around the country were — all felt the same way, i've got nothing to hide, we've got to find this enemy we can't see.

SNOWDEN: the definition of a security state is any nation that prioritizes security over all other considerations. I don't believe the united states is or ever should be a security state. If we want to be free we can't become subject to surveillance, we can't give away our privacy, we can't give away our rights, we have to be an active party, we have to be an active part of our government, and h say there are some things worth dying for, I think the country is one of them.

WILLIAMS: like a lot of young men in our country, and especially given the fact that your grandfather was at the fbi, your dad's a vet. like a lot of young men across america you wanted to join up, and you did.

SNOWDEN: in 2004, i joined the u.s. army under the 18 x-ray special forces recruit program. I have to give high respect to everyone many the military and the graduates of those programs, they are better men than i. I was injured very early on in the program and I washed out. I don't hide that.

WILLIAMS: snowden reportedly left the military after breaking both of his legs in training.

SNOWDEN: the fact is that I tried, you know, I saw what was going on in the world. I believed the government's arguments that we were going to do good things in Iraq, that we were going to free the oppressed, and I wanted to do my part to help share the national burden and create not just a better america but a better world, the problem was, as time went on, as I rose to higher and higher levels of the intelligence community, I gained more and more access, as I saw more classified information at the highest levels I realized that so many of the things that we are told by the government simply aren't true, much like the arguments about aluminum tubes and weapons of mass destruction, colin powell's discussion about anthrax is a dama — saddam was going to bring against us, the Iraq war I signed up for was launched on false premises, the american people were misled, whether that was due to bad faith or simply mistakes of intelligence, I can't say for sure, but I can say It shows the problem of putting too much faith in intelligence systems without debating them in public.

WILLIAMS: we'll take another break here, coming up, how edward snowden says the usa can reach into our lives via our phones.

(COMMERCIAL BREAK)

WILLIAMS: welcome back, government was now able, if they wanted to, to use our computers to reach into american lives and whatever you think of him, what edward snowden told us about spying on our data and our personal devices was chilling, and as an example, we used the phone in my hand.

(VIDEO BEGINS)

WILLIAMS: i want to ask you about this device, this is not my iphone, this is what drug dealers resort to, this is called a burner, it's a temporary, it's the one i brought to cover the olympics because our i.t. people told me that the russians are so good at infiltration, how good? and how good are the americans? what can the nsa do with this device, if they wanted to get into my life?

SNOWDEN: so, first off, that's probably the most expensive burner i have ever seen, but i guess we are at the up market of drug dealers here

WILLIAMS: I'm using a term of art, this is turned off, it's inert.

SNOWDEN: the nsa, the russian intelligence service, the chinese intelligence service, any intelligence service in the world that has significant funding and a real technological research team can own that phone the minute it connects to their network, as soon as you turn it on, it can be theirs, they can turn it into a microphone, they can take pictures from it, they can take the data off of it, but it's important to understand that these things are typically done on a targeted basis, right? it's only done when people go, this phone is suspicious, i think it's being held by a drug dealer. I think it is being used by a terrorist.

WILLIAMS: can anyone turn it on remotely if it's off? can they turn on apps? did anyone know or care that i googled the final score of the rangers/canadiens game last night because i was traveling here?

SNOWDEN: i would say yes to all of those, they can absolutely turn them on with the power turned off the device, that's pretty scary, the thing about the rangers game ises also salso scary, you might say, does anybody care that i'm looking up the score for the rangers game? well, a government or a hacker or some other nefarious individual would say yes, that tells a lot about you, you probably speak english, you are probably an american, you are interested in this sport, they might know what your habits are, where were you in the world when you checked the score? do you check it when you travel? do you check it when you're at home? they could tell your pattern of life, when are you doing these activities? when do you wake up? when do you go to sleep? what other phones are around you? are you with someone who's not your wife? are you some place you shouldn't be, according to the government which is arbitrary, you know, are you engaged in any kind of activities we disapprove of, even if they aren't technically illegal? all of these things can raise your level of scrutiny, these activities can be mis misinterpreted and used to do you wrong, the problem is the capabilities themselves are unregulated, uncontrol are edun krol uncontrol uncontroledded and dangerous.

WILLIAMS: all because i googled rangers, canadiens, final score.

SNOWDEN: exactly.

WILLIAMS: snowden says he was astonished at the access he had at his fingertips including a computer program that, as he put it, could get inside your thought process.

SNOWDEN: when i think about an instance that really just struck me as, oh, my god, we can do this. and we can do it to anyone was that people at usa, analysts, can actually watch people's internet communications. watch them draft correspondence and actually watch their thoughts form as they type. s as you write a message, an analyst at usa or any service using this attack against people can actually see you write sentences and backspace over your mistakes, change the words, pause, and think about what you wanted to say and then change it. it's this extraordinary intrusion not just into your communications, your finished messages but your actual drafting process, into the way you think.

WILLIAMS: you must have been aware spying is sometimes called a dirty business. lives have been taken and unsavory deeds have been committed.

SNOWDEN: you know, I don't think anybody who 's's been in the intelligence community for almost a decade as I have been, is really shocked by the specific types of general operations when they are justified, what's more shocking for anybody is not the dirtiness of the business. It's the dirtiness of the targetsing, it's the dirtiness of the way these things are being used, it's the lack of respect for the public because — the lack of respect for the intrusiveness of surveillance.

WILLIAMS: when the president and others have made the point that you should have gone through channels, become a whistleblower and not pursued the route you did, what's your response?

SNOWDEN: I actually did go through channels, and that is documented, the nsa has records, they have copies of e-mails right now to their office of general counsel, to their oversight and compliance folks from me raising concerns about the nsa's interpretations of its legal authorities, i have raised the complaints not just officially in writing through e-mail to these offices and these individuals but to my supervisors, to my colleagues, in more than one office, i did it in ft. meade, i did it in hawaii, and many, many of these individuals were shocked by these programs, they had never seen them themselves, and the ones who had went, you know, you're right, these are things that are are really concerning, these aren't things we should be doing, maybe we're going too far here, but if you say something about this, they're going to destroy you, do you know what happens to people who stand up and talk about this?

WILLIAMS: what did you report? what was the response?

SNOWDEN: so i reported that there were real problems with the way the nsa was interpreting its legal authorities, and the response more or less in bureaucratyerreaucratic language was you should stop asking questions, one of my final acts in government was continuing one of these communications with a legal office, in fact, i am so sure that these communications exist that i have called on congress to write a letter to the nsa to verify that they do, write to the office of general counsel and say, did mr. snowden ever communicate any concerns about the nsa's interpretation of its legal authorities?

WILLIAMS: now about that last point there about the paper trail that snowden says exists within the nsa, so far nbc news has learned from multiple sources that snowden did, indeed, send at least one e-mail to the general counsel's office raisingic and legal questions. we have filed a request under the freedom of information act to look for any other records, and when we continue here tonight, the are the secrets of the u.s. military safe?

(COMMERCIAL BREAK)

WILLIAMS: and welcome back, as we enter our second half hour, as we continue to hear from edward snowden, part of a wide-ranging conversation taped a week ago in moscow, we have already heard some extraordinary things, but as you will see, he's not done yet

SNOWDEN: I'm doing this to serve my country. I'm still working for the government, being a patriot means knowing when to protect your country, if I could go anywhere in the world, that place would be home.

WILLIAMS: edward snowden's last posting was in hawaii, there he rented a house where he lived with his girlfriend and performed electronic surveillance for the nsa, it was said he took his last position to gain access to the final documents he wanted to steal and then leak.

how long prior to leaving hawaii did you start to say to yourself, i'm going to gather this, i'm going to put this away, i'm going to expose this?

SNOWDEN: I think given the ongoing investigation that something better not to get into in a news interview, but I would be happy to discuss this with the government.

WILLIAMS: what is the number? what's the closest you have come to estimating the number of documents?

SNOWDEN: i will say the 1.7 million documents figure that the intelligence community has been bandying about, the director of nsa himself keith alexander said just a week ago in the australian financial review, i believe, that they have no idea what documents were taken at all, their auditing was so poor, so negligent that any private contractor, not even an employee of the government could walk into the nsa building, take whatever they wanted, and walk out with it and they would never know, now, i think that's a problem, and i think that's something that needs to be resolved, people need to be held to account for, has it happened before? could it happen again?

WILLIAMS: what didn't you grab? was there a threshold?

SNOWDEN: right, i didn't want to take information that would basically be take then and thrown out in the press that would cause harm to individuals, that would cause people to die, that would put lives at risk, so a good gauge of what information was provided to the journalists is a representation of what you see in the press, now the nsa and the defense intelligence agency and some of these other organizations have claimed that lives are at risk, that all this military information was out there, that, you know, I took all this information about missiles and warheads and tanks, but we don't see any of that in the newspaper, we haven't seen any stories on that.

WILLIAMS: snowden turned over the secret documents to glenn greenwald and laura poitras, both of whom traveled to russia for our interview. In his book "no place to hide," greenwald discussed the moment he met snowden in hong kong.

what did you make of him?

GREENWALD: the initial impression was one of extreme confusion. I was expecting to meet someone in his 60s or 70s, someone very senior in the agency because I knew almost nothing about him prior to our arrival in hong kong.

SNOWDEN: it was a really intimidating moment. you know, it was the most real point of no return because the minute you start talking to a journalist as an intelligence officer on camera, there is really no going back from that, that's where it all comes together.

WILLIAMS: also, you had this tangible evidence. in effect he was saying to you if I wasn't legit, where else would I have gotten this?

GREENWALD: right, that was certainly a good start to establishing his credibility and his authenticity was the fact he was able to produce many thousands of documents from the most secretive agency of the world's most powerful but at the same time there were government, questions about the authenticity of the documents t providence, the motives that led to his taking them and what it was he would say when he identified himself to the world as the source.

WILLIAMS: by handing over the documents to journalists, snowden said he wanted to put some space between himself and what he himself stole are from government computers, he wanted others to break the stories and do the reporting and check to see which stories might cause undue harm.

SNOWDEN: and that's the reason that the journalists have been required by their agreement with me as the source, although they could obviously break that or do whatever they want, but I demanded that they agreed to consult with the government to make sure no individuals or specific harms could be caused by any of that reporting.

WILLIAMS: that includes nbc news which has reported on its own batch of snowden documents and has a reporting relationship with glenn greenwald.

SNOWDEN: when it comes to specific stories about the specific collection programs, about specific targets, these aren't decided by me. these are decided by newspapers.

WILLIAMS: you see the part of this and for a lay audience looking on, they know that this came from you, the bulk release to the journalists came from you, they are guessing that you had decisions to make within what you had access to, so then they hear you saying, I didn't put that out, the journalists did.

SNOWDEN: right, that's a fair question, anyone can second guess my judgment, again, i'm a human being, i could make mistakes, i could make the wrong call, but the reality is the situation determined that this needed to be told to the public.

WILLIAMS: to your knowledge, there is nothing in what you have handed over to the journalists materially damaging or threatening to the military or national security?

SNOWDEN: there is nothing that would be published that would harm the public interest, these are programs that need to be understood, that need to be known, that require deep background and context for research, they are difficult to report, but they are of critical public importance.

WILLIAMS: just for clarification here note that snowden didn't deny turning over military secrets, he asserted instead they wouldn't be published, another break, when we continue, how snowden justifies what he did.

(COMMERCIAL BREAK)

WILLIAMS: on the range between ticker tape parade entence, what do you think ought to happen to you if and when you return to the united states?

SNOWDE: these are things that no individual should empower themselves to really decide. you know, I'm going to give myself a parade, but neither am I going to walk into a jail cell to serve as a bad example for other people in government who see something happening, some violation of the tion who think they need to say something about it.

WILLIAMS: you hear often in the united states are why doesn't he come home and face the music?

SNOWDEN: it's a fair question, why doesn't he face charges? but it's also uninformed, because what has been lain against me aren't normal charges, they are extraordinary charges, we have seen more charges under the espionage act in the last administration than we have in all other administrations in american history, the espionage act provides anyone accused of it of no chance to make a public defense, you are not allowed to argue based on all the evidence in your favor because that evidence may be classified, even if the it is exculpatory, when people say why don't you face the music, i say you have to understand the music is not an open court and a fair trial.

WILLIAMS: what would you do if you had an aience with the president right now? what would you say?

SNOWDEN: I would leave advising the president to his advisers, that's -- I wouldn't presume to place myself on the level to be able to suggest what his course of action should be.

WILLIAMS: would you ask him if you could come home free and clear?

SNOWDEN: I think that's a decision he'll weigh and decide based on what he believes would serve the public interest. I think that's proper and appropriate.

WILLIAMS: in your mind though, are you blameless? have you done, as you look at this, just a good thing? have you performed, as you see it, a public service?

SNOWDEN: I think it can be both. I think the most important idea is to remember that there have been times throughout american history where what is right is not the same as what is legal, sometimes to do the right thing you have to break a law, and the key there is in terms of civil disobedience, you have to make sure that what you are risking, what you are bringing onto yourself doesn't serve as a detriment to anybody else, it doesn't hurt anybody else, if you are volunteering yourself to be used as a negative example, to spend a lifetime in prison rather than to spend a time in prison — a short period where you will come out, advocate, emerge stronger and inspire other people to resist these policieses, spolicies, are you doing good or bad?

WILLIAMS: legal sources tell nbc news that snowden's legal team has been in contact with the government's lawyers, but negotiations have t begun.

are you looking for clemency or amnesty? would you like to go home?

SNOWDEN: I don't think there has ever been any question that I wild like to go home, from day one I have said I'm doing this to serve my country. I'm still working for the government, now whether amnesty or clemency becomes a possibility is not for me to say, that's a debate for the public and the government to decide, but if I could go anywhere in the world, that place would be home.

WILLIAMS: and when we continue, an american in russia. edward snowden talks about what his life is like now in exile and how he feels about coming home.

(COMMERCIAL BREAK)

WILLIAMS: this is a big cultural change, you, in effect, moved to russia from hawaii. what is your life like?

SNOWDEN: you know, it's — it is a major cultural gap, it requires adjustment, but even though i didn't choose to be here, even though, you know, circumstances really trapped me here, i can adapt. I can live life as an american more or less, that's the beauty of the internet, we are no longer tied to our communities merely by, you know, miz call physical connections, right now i'm watching a show, "the wire." i'm really enjoying it, second season, not so great, but —

WILLIAMS: what do you make of the fact that president putin's standing in the world, let's say, has changed so dramatically during the time you have been here?

SNOWDEN: it's really frustrating for someone who is working so hard to expand the domain of our rights and our privacy to end up stuck in a place where those rights are being challenged in ways that I would consider deeply unfair. the recent bloggers' registration law in russia, I can't think of any basis for a law like that, not just in russia, but any country, the government shouldn't regulate the operations of a free press whether it is nbc or some blogger in their living room, there is so much that needs to be defended here in russia, but I am limited by my inability to speak russian and so on that it's an isolating and frustrating thing. I really hope that russia, the united states and many other countries will work to push back against this constantly increasing surveillance, this constant erosion and abrasion of public rights.

WILLIAMS: correct me if i'm wrong, the arc of your life is you went from signing up for the military of after 9/11, in effect saying you were willing to die for your country to then telling people you half expected to die via abduction or assassination after what you have done in this instance, that's a pretty dramatic arc since 2003, 2004.

SNOWDEN: i think that's actually a solid representation of the dramatic arcses sthat have happened within our government in the same period, do you think our government has changed since 9/11? have the policies changed? has civil engagement with the government changed? have our politics changed? are things radically different in terms of partisanship? there have been radical changes within our government.

WILLIAMS: do you see yourself as a patriot?

SNOWDEN: I do. you know, I think patriot is a word that's thrown around so much that it can be devalued nowadays, but being a patriot doesn't mean prioritizing service to government above all else, being a patriot means knowing when to protect your country, knowing when to protect your countrymen from the violations of and encroachments of adversaries and those adversaries don't have to be foreign countries, they can be bad policies, they can be officials who, you know, need a little bit more accountability, they can be mistakes of government and simple overreach and things that should never have been tried or that went wrong.

WILLIAMS: did you say earlier you were still serving your government?

SNOWDEN: yes.

Williams, how so?

SNOWDEN: when you look at the actions that I have taken, when you look at the carefulness of the program ares that have been disclosed, when you look at the way this has been filtered through the most trusted journalistic institutions in america, the way the government has had a chance to chime in on this and to make their case, and when you look at the changes that it's resulted in, we have had the first open federal court to ever review these programs declare it likely unconstitutional and orwellian and you see congress agreeing that massive surveillance, bulk collection needs to end. with all of these things happening thatheovernment agrees all the way up to the president, again, make us stronger how can it be said that I did not serve my government? how can it be said that this harmed the country when all three branches of government have made reforms as a result?

WILLIAMS: many in government say snowden should say for what he's done whether or not he comes home.

what do you miss about home?

SNOWDEN: i think the only — the only answer to something like that for somebody in my situation is, you know, what don't i miss? what would you miss? what wouldn't you miss? I miss my family, I miss my home. I miss my colleagues. I miss the work, because caught up in all these issues, people have unfairly demonized the nsa to a point that's too extreme, these are good people trying to do hard work for good reasons, the problem that we are confronted with, the challenge that we are facing is not the working level guy, some mustache-twirling villain out to destroy your life, it's the fact that senior officials are investing themselves with powers that they are not entitled to, and they are doing it without asking the public for any kind of consent.

WILLIAMS: is what i heard you feeling bad for the damage to the nsa as a result of what you have exposed from the nsa?

SNOWDEN: well, what you need to understand in what I was saying — I guess not what you need to understand, but what I'm saying is not damage to the nsa. It's the sort of conspiratorial that can emerge when there are abuses that le this they can do no good and the government has legitimate programs and purposes and they can do great things, the nsa can as well, I think It's important to remember that people don't set their lives on fire, they don't say good-bye to their families, actually pack up without saying good-bye to their families, they don't walk away from their extraordinary comfortable lives, I made a lot of money for a guy with no high school diploma, and burn down everything they love for no reason.

WILLIAMS: so you're a kid from north carolina and while i, after this interview, am free to fly back to the united states, you can't, does that hurt you?

SNOWDEN: I think no american could be prohibited from coming home or traveling anywhere else without feeling a sense of loss, but, again, I may have lost my ability to travel, but I have gained the ability to go to sleep at night, put my head on the pillow and feel comfortable that I have done the right thing even when it was the hard thing. I'm comfortable with that.

WILLIAMS: a good number of americans, of course, feel that because of what they see as an act of treason, they sleep less soundly at night fearing this massive leak of secrets has endangered the country, there is more on the way, glenn greenwald says the next story he is going to public based on the snowden documents may be the biggest yet in terms of impact, that is our broadcast for tonight, we're going to keep going in the studio to ask the question, in part to take on the same question is snowden a hero or a traitor? we have assembled correspondents and former government officials.

Jay Carney (White House spo	kesman) is going in front of the press at 1230 todayhe will get the standard fair that	we have used over the past few months...we can't possibly pass anything useful to him by that time.

That said...there are still discussions with DOJ about possibly releasing the one email we have between Snowden and the OGC...and the potential for other press conference later today...so we need to move fast.

ADM Rogers has scheduled a update on the NBC interview in his office tomorrow at 0900. Our info will be used there as well.

(U) On 29 May 2014, NSA Public Affairs released the below statement to the press:

BEGIN STATEMENT

NSA has now explained that they have found one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the Office of the General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The email did not raise allegations or concerns about wrongdoing or abuse, but posed a legal question that the Office of General Counsel addressed. There was not additional follow-up noted. The email will be released later today.

There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searches for additional indications of outreach from him in those areas and to date have not discovered any engagements related to his claims.

END STATEMENT

(U//FOUO) We understand the frustration many must feel. Please understand we are making every effort to ensure that NSA continues to be transparent with the public while protecting sources and methods and the integrity of the investigation.

(U) Please remember that if you are approached by the press regarding any of these allegations; please refer them to the NSA Public Affairs Office, 301-688-6524 or nsapao@nsa.gov.

Thanks much, (U FFOUO)	(b)(3)-P.L. 86-36

(U//FOUO) After some thought and counsel I think we need greater certainty about whether or not there is/was additional correspondence before we stake the reputation of the Agency on a counter narrative. I am going to trigger an action for the appropriate organizations to do an e-mail search to affirm that there is no further correspondence that could substantiate Snowden's claim. I think we need to complete that before we move forward.

(U//FOUO) Lots have folks have jumped in to offer to help or have started action to move forward on the option to release a fact to counter the anticipated challenge in the Vanity Fair article that Snowden tried to communicate his concerns while he was still an employee. This kind of responsiveness, and especially more proactive actions to undermine future and recurring false narratives, is the direction in which we want to take the work of the MLTF. That work will by necessity require a closer, quicker more structure engagement with your organizations and others. We need to be synchronized as to actions, timing and message.

(U//FOUO) In talking to ______ at ODNI PAO who has deep experience in these matters he suggests that if we are prepared and cleared to release the information which refutes Snowden's claim, we should seriously consider contacting Vanity Fair BEFORE they publish and let them know that we plan to immediately and publicly challenge that assertion

AND make clear that we warned Vanity Fair that the facts are wrong. I believe we need to give this approach senous consideration. Perhaps you are already aware of these additional contacts between SV and Snowden.

I don't believe these change the content or posture of the Q and A as Question 6 is styled"receive correspondence about his concerns." (emphasis added)\
I don't think the query in person meeting about the test (OVSC 1203) changes our response. Nor do I believe the SysAdmin support he gave to would count as interaction about his concerns.

Q31's answers  ADS&CI Chief of Staff	(b)(b)-F-1E, 60-50

If so, in what form, on what dates and with what specificity as to content?

(U//FOUG). On Friday 5 April 2013 4:11 pm Eastern time, Snowden submitted a question to the Office of the General Counsel (OGC) via the "Email Us" form on their internal website. This form generated an email to OGC and copied Snowden, a copy of which remained in Snowden's email Inbox when the investigation obtained it and is marked as having been read but not forwarded or responded to. The question concerned the precedence of Executive Orders and Federal Statutes as well as precedence between DOD and ODNI regulations.

(U//FOUO) Less than a half hour later (at 4:35 pm) an Office Manager for OGC forwarded the email to the SID Oversight and Compliance training group and CC'd Snowden indicating the question might be better answered by that office. A copy of this email was filed by Snowden in a folder within his Inbox. The email is marked has having been read, but not been forwarded or responded to.

(U//FOUO) The next working day, Monday 8 April 2013 at 1:37 pm Eastern time, a lawyer with OGC responded to Snowden's questions. A copy of this email was filed in a folder within his Inbox. The email is marked has having been read, but not forwarded or responded to.

(U//FOUO) All three emails are attached.

Were his inquiries responded to? If so, how and when?

(U/FOUO) See above for the emailed correspondence. ADS&CI has spoken with the lawyer who responded to Snowden's inquiry and she remembered considering calling Snowden since the inquiry was out of the ordinary. However, she decided not to and instead in her email invites him to call her if he wanted further discussion. She does not recall any actual telephonic contact by Snowden.

How was our search for any correspondence from him conducted?

(U//FOUO) We have reviewed all of the email belonging to Edward Snowden which we have been able to obtain. This has included both manual review of the email as well as searches tailored to identify any correspondence involving the organizations of the OIG, OGC, and Oversight and Compliance.

(U/FOUO) We have located additional email between Snowden and members of OGC and Oversight and Compliance relating to work on troubleshooting IT issues, but these emails do not contain any questions or concerns about the legal authorities under which NSA operates.

Was it exhaustive and authoritative?

(U//FOUO) It has been as exhaustive and authoritative as possible given the evidence we have been able to discover after a comprehensive investigation into Snowden's activities at NSA. Due to the ongoing criminal investigation, we are unable to provide details.

Is it possible there is correspondence we overlooked, didn't record?

(U//FOUO) It is extremely unlikely that additional correspondence exists which matches Snowden's descriptions, specifically email sent to members of OGC and oversight and compliance sent as "one of [his] final acts in government."

(U//FOUO) It remains possible that unrecorded verbal communication existed between Snowden and one of the offices he cites, but we have not located any individual who remembers any such hypothetical conversations despite a comprehensive investigation into Snowden's activities at NSA.

NSA, Snowden clash over 2013 internal email release Thu, May 29 21:21 PM EDT

(b)(6)

By Warren Strobel

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - An email exchange released on Thursday shows Edward Snowden questioned the U.S. National Security Agency's legal training programs, but provides no evidence the former contractor complained internally about vast NSA surveillance programs that he later leaked to the media.

Snowden responded in an email to the Washington Post that the release by U.S. officials "is incomplete."

The release of the April 2013 emails between Snowden and the NSA's legal office is the latest round in a battle between Snowden, who casts himself as a crusading whistleblower, and U.S. security officials, who say he failed to report his concerns to superiors before acting.

In an interview with NBC News on Wednesday, Snowden said he had raised alarms at multiple levels about the NSA's broad collection of phone, email and Internet connections.

"I have raised the complaints not just officially in writing through email to these offices and these individuals but to my supervisors, to my colleagues, in more than one office," Snowden told the network.

"Many, many of these individuals were shocked by these programs," Snowden said, adding that he was advised: "If you say something about this, they're going to destroy you."

The emails were first released by the office of Democratic Senator Dianne Feinstein, chairwoman of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

In a statement, the NSA said: "The e-mail did not raise allegations or concerns about wrongdoing or abuse, but posed a legal question that the Office of General Counsel addressed."

"There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for additional indications of outreach from him in those areas and to date have not discovered any engagements related to his claims," it said.

Snowden told the Post there were other emails "and not just on this topic. I'm glad they've shown they have access to records they claimed just a few months ago did not exist, and I hope we'll see the rest of them very soon." The email exchange appears to be the first internal communication by Snowden, while he was working for the NSA, to be released publicly.

'INCOMPLETE LEAK'

In an April 5, 2013, email to the NSA's Office of General Counsel, Snowden questioned the contents of a mandatory legal training course.

The course, he wrote, cited the U.S. Constitution as the nation's top legal authority, followed by "Federal Statutes/Presidential Executive Orders (EO)."

"I'm not entirely certain, but this does not seem correct, as it seems to imply Executive Orders have the same precedence as law," Snowden wrote. "Could you please clarify? Thank you very much, Ed."

An unidentified official in the General Counsel's office wrote back three days later that executive orders, issued by a U.S. president, "have 'the force and effect of law.' That said, you are correct that E.O.s cannot override a statute."

Asked by the Post on Thursday if he had been was wrong in saying he reached out to many colleagues and supervisors to express his concerns, Snowden replied: "No, not at all.

"The bottom line is that even though I knew the system was designed to reject concerns raised, I showed numerous colleagues direct evidence of programs that those colleagues considered unconstitutional or otherwise concerning. Today's strangely tailored and incomplete leak only shows the NSA feels it has something to hide."

All,

I have sent the below to the press who have contacted NSA PAO today. We will continue to provide this language to any other outlets that request our response.

NSA has now explained that they have found one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The e-mail did not raise allegations or concerns about wrongdoing or abuse, but posed a legal question that the Office of General Counsel addressed. There was not additional follow-up noted. The e-mail will be released later today.

There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for additional indications of outreach from him in those areas and to date have not discovered any engagements related to his claims.

Just seeing this thread. I would modify a little (below). Also, our leg folks just heard from Grannis that Sen Feinstein is releasing the email - I don't know if that is confirmed or if Jay needs to be aware of that before the briefing . . .

--Did Snowden raise concerns with NSA as he said he did?

We have found one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The question was received and an answer was provided to Mr. Snowden. There was not additional follow-up noted. There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for additional indications of outreach from him in those areas and to date have not discovered any engagements related to his claims.

-- How do you plan to respond to the FOIA request?

We received the request from NBC and are following normal procedures for processing the request.

I've now read the relevant portion of the preliminary transcript, which is excerpted below:

"i actually did go through channels. and that is documented. the nsa has records. they have copies of e-mails right now to their office of general counsel, to their oversight and compliance folks from me raising concerns about the nsa's interpretations of its legal authorities. i have raised the complaints not just officially in writing through e-mail to these offices and these individuals but to my supervisors, to my colleagues, in more than one office. i did it in ft. meade. i did it in hawaii. and many, many of these individuals were shocked by these programs. they had never seen them themselves. and the ones who had went, you know, you're right. these are things that are are really concerning. these aren't things we should be doing. maybe we're going too far here. but if you say something about this, they're going to destroy you. do you know what happens to people who stand up and talk about this?"

Reading this, I'm not sure that releasing the email will necessarily prove him a liar. It is, I could argue, technically true that the email I have seen "rais[ed] concerns about the NSA's interpretation of its legal authorities." As I recall, the email essentially questions a document that Snowden interpreted as claiming that Executive Orders were on a part with statutes. While that surely is not raising the kind of questions that Snowden is trying to suggest he raised, neither does it seem to me that that email is a home run refutation.

Bob

Vanee,

Per our conversation last Friday, I have further requests for comment and/or response from the NSA.

What units/groups/directorates did Mr. Snowden serve in during his various time employed with NSA (via Dell, BAH or any other capacity)?

Did Mr. Snowden ever attend a meeting or meetings with the Director of Technology Directorate (or where dir/ Tech was present)?

Did the NSA adopt a systems information program to protect NSA facilities (the data and systems) in the event of a disaster?

Was Mr. Snowden assigned to do work on identifying China's cyber espionage efforts?

Was Mr. Snowden asked or tasked to help identify areas in NSA's network infrastructure that were vulnerable to hacking?

Did Mr. Snowden keep his CIA PSEUDO while employed with NSA?

Generally speaking, does someone coming over from CIA keep their PSEUDO, or does NSA give them a new one?

Hi.

If you're still in, please see my High Side note about a proposal to release the leaker's ONE e-mail to NSA OGC (and OGC's response to his very benign question).

Stu: it's my understanding that you've had conversations about this with Raj and others. The leaker's ONE e-mail (that we're aware of) is on the High Side, too.

NBC has yet to shed more light on the current claims. Note: Many news outlets have asked for a copy of the e-mail in recent months. We'd have to release it to all.

Best,		·

Yes, have read that story closely, and noted NSA's response. Am asking again, based on more detailed claims in our interview, whether Mr. Snowden sent any emails to the OGC or any other compliance office within the agency regard his concerns about any of the NSA's programs. Further, were any emails sent by Mr. Snowden specifically in 2013 to anyone in the NSA that displayed or suggested Mr. Snowden's concerns or objections to NSA programs.

Let's start with this one, but I will still need to have a fol	llow up phone conversation.
Can the NSA and/or DNI confirm or deny that Mr. Snowd legal compliance body?	den sent emails to the NSA's OGC	or any other internal/agency
NBC News is aware that in the past NSA has denied that	they can find any such emails.

Shawn and Vanee	(b)(0)

As you may have seen, NBC News will be airing a long interview with Edward Snowden. Given that he makes plenty of claims in the interview, I have the enviable job of checking the veracity of said claims. Is it possible to discuss by phone at your earliest convenience. I have initial inquiry, then, by mid day, I should have the final 3 or 4.

Re: (U//POUO) Reference Document: Q&A Prep for Snowden's Claim of Concerns and

Notification

(U) Executive Summary

(UffFOUC). Following the NBC interview with Edward Snowden broadcast on 28 MAY 14, the Intelligence Community decided to release the only known-email exchange (known to exist at the time) between Edward Snowden and the NSA Office of the General Counsel in which a basic question of legal precedence was asked and answered by an OGC lawyer. A Question & Answer paper was developed for US Government officials to provide background and unclassified talking points to support the release at news conferences and any potential follow-up questions. Selected portions of that paper were actually used by the public affairs offices at the White House and ODNI level.

(U/FOUO) As the event progressed the Q&A package was modified to become the paper that follows below. This new paper is intended to be a reference source for the event, or as a starting point should any further evidence come to light in the continuing investigation.

(U) Bolding and emphasis in this paper is primarily for the benefit of the reader, and is not required to be included in any formal responses to queries on these topics.

(U) The Trigger Event

(U) Edward Snowden has repeated claimed to have made attempts to express his concerns about the lawfulness of certain NSA activities to NSA colleagues, leadership, and through official channels. The following serves as an authoritative accounting of facts as relates to this claim and should be used as the basis for considering any responses related to these issues.

(U) Framing Questions

(U#Pouo)

A. Did Snowden raise concerns with NSA as he said he did?

(U) We have found a single instance of one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The question was received and an answer was provided to Mr. Snowden. There was not additional follow-up noted. There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for evidence of outreach from him in those areas and have not discovered any engagements related to his claims. ((Note: This paragraph was publicly released via the White House Press office on 29 MAY 14))

B. How did NSA respond to the NBC FOIA request?

(U) NBC issued a FOIA request for any and all evidence that Edward Snowden had formally filed his concerns with Agency authorities. The FOIA request was being handled according to the normal process when it was overtaken by a decision on the part of the NSA Director to release the text of the one e-mail referenced above.

(U//FOUO) Shortly after noon on 28 May 2014, NSA provided the response to Question A. above, along with a redacted version of the one email inquiry. A copy of that redacted version is stored in MLTF Action folder 1602.

(U//FOUC) NSA contacted NBC the following week to close out the request and informed them that the one email that responded to their inquiry was now public record for all.

NSA Background to Potential Q&A Responses:

 What is the training and awareness provided to government and contractor employees about reporting activities they perceive to be inconsistent with law and policies?

Training

(U) NSA/CSS provides training to all employees in order to maintain a high degree of sensitivity to, and understanding of the intelligence-related laws, regulations and policies associated with the protection of privacy rights during mission operations. Throughout the curriculum, the instruction repeatedly emphasizes the employee's responsibility to report questionable activity and the mechanisms to do so.

(U//FOUO) Selected courses are mandatory before an employee (civilian, military or contractor) can gain access to certain SIGINT operational systems. These specific training courses discuss the limitations of SIGINT authorities and mission operations to include reminders and guidance about who to contact with questions about scope of authorities, and who to contact if there are known or even potential compliance concerns.

The Basics -- OVSC1000

- (U) Below are examples from NSA's core Intelligence Oversight (IO) course "NSA/CSS Intelligence Oversight Training" (OVSC1000). This course provides training to all employees in order to maintain a high degree of sensitivity to, and understanding of the intelligence-related laws, regulations, and policies associated with the protection of U.S. person privacy rights during mission operations.
  - (U) Most contractors are required to take this course. However, it is not mandatory for all contractors and will depend on their assignment, duties, and the stipulations of their controlling contract. Snowden's role as a systems administrator supporting SIGINT operations, and later as an analyst-in-training in APR—MAY 2014 would clearly place him in this the category of those required to complete OVSC1000.

(C/NF) N.B. Snowden's training record is considered Personally Identifiable
Information, and the protection or dissemination of that information is governed by U.S. law and Agency policy, and is not part of this Q&A paper. For more information about Snowden's database accesses, skill set, and training record, see action for more information.

(U) In OVSC1000, sStudents are familiarized with the major tenets of core IO documents, including Directive Type Memorandum (DTM) 08-052; "DoD Guidance for Reporting Questionable Intelligence Activities and Significant or Highly Sensitive Matters." The following are examples of guidance provided within OVSC1000-the course:

CONFIDENTIAL/NOFORM

- (U) If you become aware of a violation of the authorities, you should report it immediately. If you are unsure if a violation has been committed, consult with your manager, your organization's 10 representative, or Compliance organization. You may also contact the NSA OGC or the NSA/CSS Office of the Inspector General or OIG for assistance.
- (U) It is important for personnel to understand that for purposes of intelligence activities governed by E.O. 12333, DoD Regulation 5240.1-R contains the approved procedures for use within DoD. These procedures also reflect DoD policies for employee conduct that require you to be familiar with restrictions on the collection, retention and dissemination of U.S. person information and the responsibility to report questionable intelligence activities to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS IG.
- (U) Employees shall report any questionable activity to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS OIG. A questionable activity is defined as any conduct that constitutes, or is related to, an intelligence activity that maybe unlawful or contrary to executive order, presidential directive, or applicable DoD policy. Employees may also report questionable activities directly to the DoD General Counsel or Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Intelligence Oversight, ATSD(10).
- (U) DIRNSA is also responsible for ensuring that no adverse action is taken against an employee because the employee reports a questionable intelligence activity pursuant to the established procedures. In addition, DTM 08-052 contains specific requirements for reporting to the President's Intelligence Advisory Board questionable intelligence activities and significant or highly sensitive matters that could potentially impugn the reputation or integrity of the DoD Intelligence Community or otherwise call into question the propriety of an intelligence activity. Should you need clarification or have questions about the reporting requirements for possible significant or highly sensitive matters, you should consult with your manager, your compliance organization, the NSA OGC or the NSA/CSS OIG.
- (U) Report questionable or significant and highly sensitive intelligence activities to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS OIG. You can find contact information can be found in the Resources section.

Awareness

(U/FOUO) NSA employees are provided information on how to report concerns regarding their work, or their work environment in a number of different venues to include formal training, briefings to large and small audiences, Agency static and electronic billboards and wall displays, and Agency-wide emails and announcements. All employees are made aware of how they may report concerns, even anonymously, within or outside their supervisory management chain. The relevant processes are reinforced in recurrent, mandatory training. Depending on the particular issue and individual circumstances, NSA employees may report concerns through many different avenues inside NSA, across the Executive Branch, and to Congress. The NSA OIG website.

provides information about submitting hotline complaints and addresses anonymity and confidentiality concerns.

(U) Prior to the Snowden incident (pre-MAY 2013), the OIG issued a number of agency-all messages summarizing investigation results of illegal activity and messages covering policies and avenues for reporting suspected mismanagement and violations of law, policy, and regulations. While not every IG report during this time frame dealt with intelligence matters, they all contained the following statement about the mission of the OIG and how concerns can be reported:

The NSA Office of the Inspector General actively investigates allegations of fraud against the Agency. The OIG is committed to eliminating fraud, waste, mismanagement of Agency resources, and abuse of authority. If you are aware of potential fraud, waste, or abuse, please report your concern to the OIG by visiting the Hotline office in 2B7088, calling 963-5023, or visiting the OIG Hotline website. You may remain anonymous when submitting concerns to the OIG Hotline. If you choose not to remain anonymous, your identity will be protected.

- (U) After MAY 2013 and the issuance of NSA/CSS Policy 1-60, the IG issued a specific message addressing reporting policies and how to submit concerns in JUN 2013 and repeated this message in 2014.
  - (U) Within the Agency and the Federal Government, there are several avenues for reporting suspected mismanagement and violations of law, policy, and regulations. We recommend that you first try to resolve problems by bringing them to the attention of your leadership; managers are often in the best position to assess concerns, recognize process shortfalls, and take corrective action.

(UMPOUD) If you believe that management has not been able to resolve your concerns, the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) can assist. NSA/CSS Policy 1-60 requires that NSA/CSS personnel report to the OIG possible violations of law, rules, or regulations; mismanagement; gross waste of funds; misconduct by senior officials: or abuse of authority. A complainant's identity is protected by law, and NSA/CSS Policy 1-62 protects employees from reprisal for communications with the OIG. You can contact the OIG by telephone (963-5023), in person (OPS 2B7088), or anonymously through our Web site ("go IG").

(U) The Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act (ICWPA) allows employees to report "urgent concerns" to the intelligence committees of Congress. A complaint made in accordance with the ICWPA ensures that your concerns are addressed and that classified information is protected. ICWPA complaints are made through the NSA/CSS OIG or the Department of Defense IG.

		ern, go to the IG Web site ("go IG") NSANet. Contact the U.S. Cyber ing that organization.

2. What are the mechanisms by which that reporting can occur?

(U//FOUO) There are various mechanisms in by which reporting can occur. Employees and contractors may provide information to the DoD OIG, IC OIG, NSA OIG anonymously, the OIG website via phone, in writing or to various offices within NSA such as:

- the Office of Equal Employment Opportunity & Diversity,
- the Office of the Director of Compliance,
- the Office of the General Counsel, and
- m the Privacy and Civil Liberties Office.
- the Associate Directorate for Security & Counterintelligence

(U) The IG Act of 1978, as amended by the Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act (ICWPA), also provides contractors and employees of intelligence agencies a mechanism for reporting to Congress classified information alleging wrongdoing. Employees may contact the intelligence committees directly only if the employee –

- a) before making such a contact, furnishes to the head of the establishment, through the Inspector General, a statement of the employee's complaint or information and notice of the employee's intent to contact the intelligence committees directly; and
- b) obtains and follows from the head of the establishment, through the Inspector General, direction on how to contact the intelligence committees in accordance with appropriate security practices.
- 3. What is the process, accountability for addressing such reports?

[(U/FFOUC)]. When an allegation is presented to the NSA OIG or referred to them by an internal agency element, the OIG Investigations Division reviews it to determine the appropriate action. The NSA OIG also responds to referrals from external agencies when appropriate. Complaints regarding systemic process problems may be referred to the OIG Audit or Intelligence Oversight Divisions. Concerns involving violations of law or policy are pursued via a preliminary inquiry, and if warranted, via an investigation, by the Investigations Division. All complaints and their outcomes are tracked through the Inspector General case management system.

(U) If an inquiry is reported directly to Congress and a copy is not provided to Agency authorities (see Question 2 above), then the NSA OIG may not have knowledge of such a request.

4. Is there a record of these kinds of inquiries and responses?

(U//FOUO) The NSA OIG keeps a record of all inquiries and actions taken.

5. Do we [NSA] have any examples of reported activity which resulted in corrective measures?

(U//FOUO) Activity that is found to be a violation of law, directive, or policy is thoroughly reviewed to determine corrective action. NSA's incidents are most often tied to human error or technical malfunction that is corrected by local management within the capabilities of the existing systems in consultation with the NSA OIG and senior leadership. As of JUN 2014 and as previously reported to the intelligence committees, the OIG is aware of thirteen instances of intentional misuse of the SIGINT system by individuals over the last 10 years. Most were referred to the Department of Justice, and eventually ended with the departure of the employee involved. Auditing and monitoring processes in the operational areas where many of these violations took place were significantly modified or improved.

(U//TOUO) Other than violations reported by NSA OGC to the Department of Justice, we are not aware of any SIGINT programs or activities that are inconsistent with the law. Each quarter, the OIG and OGC review reported instances of non-compliance with SIGINT and Information Assurance authorities that are typically the result of human error or technical malfunction. These matters are addressed by local management or through other corrective actions taken-both directed by, and in concert with, by NSA's compliance organizations.

- 6. (OGC) Did we receive correspondence from Edward Snowden about his concerns?
- 7. (OGC) If so, in what form, on what dates and with what specificity as to content?
- 8. (OGC) Were his inquiries responded to? If so, how and when?
- (U) No such correspondence has been discovered.
- (U) NSA is unaware of any correspondence Edward Snowden had with the NSA Inspector General, the Office of General Counsel, or his supervisors wherein he expressed constitutional concerns about NSA's intelligence operations or authorities. We have found one instance of an e-mail inquiry to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of the content of some training material.

(U) On Friday 5 April 2013 at about 4PM, Edward Snowden sent an email to the Office of General Counsel questioning the hierarchy of several NSA authorities identified in a training course.

CONFIDENTIAL/MOPORN

- (U) The inquiry did not raise any concerns with the substance of any particular statute, Executive Order, policy, or regulation.
- (U) The inquiry did not suggest that NSA was violating any legal authority; nor did the inquiry question whether NSA had authority to conduct specific operations.
- (U) On Monday 8 April 2013, the next business day, the Office of General Counsel responded to his question and the attorney offered to discuss the issue further if he desired to do so. There is no evidence that any additional correspondence or contact occurred on this matter.

9. (Q/TD) How was our search for any correspondence from him conducted?

(U#FOUO) As of JUN 2014, the investigation was still ongoing. We have reviewed all of the email and NSANet social media posts authored by Edward Snowden which we have been able to obtain. This review has included manual reviews of his email and posts, as well as searches of that email tailored to identify any responsive correspondence.

(U//FOUO). We have located additional email between Snowden and members of Office of General Counsel and Oversight and Compliance relating to his job duties and work on troubleshooting IT issues, but these emails do not contain any questions or concerns about the legal authorities under which NSA operates.

10. (Q/TD) Was it exhaustive and authoritative?

(U/ADUO). Given the importance of this issue and the repeated claims by Mr. Snowden, the effort to uncover any written or recollected evidence of these engagements has been thorough and involved cognizant authorities in each area of review.

11. (Q/TD) Is it possible there is correspondence we overlooked, didn't record?

(UHFOUO) We cannot completely rule out the possibility that something may have been overlooked, but we have high confidence that the searches and interviews for relevant information we undertook would have uncovered evidence of assertions that rise to the level of outreach and protestation claimed by Mr. Snowden. They have not.

(U) Edward Snowden has repeated claimed to have made attempts to express his concerns about the lawfulness of certain NSA activities to NSA colleagues, leadership, and through official channels. The following serves as an authoritative accounting of facts as relates to this claim and should be used as the basis for considering any responses related to these issues.

Framing questions

Framing questions

- A. Did Snowden raise concerns with NSA as he said he did?
- (U) We have found a single instance of one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The question was received and an answer was provided to Mr. Snowden. There was not additional follow-up noted. There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for evidence of outreach from him in those areas and have not discovered any engagements related to his claims. ((Note: This paragraph was publicly released via the White House Press office on 29 MAY 14))
  - B. How did NSA respond to the NBC FOIA request?
- (U) The FOIA request was being handled according to the normal process when it was overtaken by a decision on the part of the NSA Director to release the text of the one e-mail referenced above.

(U#FOUO) Shortly after noon on 28 May 2014, NSA provided the paragraph in response A, above along with a redacted version of the one email inquiry. The copy of that redacted version is stored in MLTF Action folder 1602.

(U//FOUO) NSA contacted the FOIA originator NBC to dose out the request,

NSA Background to Potential Q&A Responses:

- What is the training and awareness provided to government and contractor employees about reporting activities they perceive to be inconsistent with law and policies?
- (U) The NSA/CSS Comprehensive Mission-Compliance Program-provides training to all employees in order to maintain a high degree of sensitivity to, and understanding of the intelligence-related laws, regulations and policies associated with the protection of privacy rights during mission operations. Throughout the curriculum, the instruction repeatedly emphasizes the employee's responsibility to report questionable activity and the mechanisms to do so.

(U//FOUO) NSA encourages employees to report concerns regarding their work or work environment in a number of different venues to include formal training, briefings to large and small audiences. Agency static and electronic biliboards and wall displays, and Agency-wide emails and announcements. All employees are made aware of how they may report concerns, even anonymously, within or outside their supervisory management chain. The relevant processes are reinforced in recurrent, mandatory training. Depending on the particular issue and individual circumstances, NSA employees may report concerns through many different avenues inside NSA, across the Executive Branch, and to Congress. The NSA OIG website provides information about submitting hotline complaints and addresses anonymity and confidentiality concerns.

(U//POUD) The NSA OlG also provides briefings on how to report concerns to various NSA training classes, including the new hire orientation class, mid-level leadership classes, and other classes specific to skill communities, such as contracting.

(U//FGUO) Selected courses are mandatory before an employee (civilian, military or contractor) can gain access to certain SIGINT operational systems. These specific training courses discuss the limitations of SIGINT authorities and mission operations to include reminders and guidance about who to contact with questions about scope of authorities and who to contact if there are known or even potential compliance concerns.

- (U) Below are examples from NSA's core intelligence Oversight (iO) course "NSA/CSS intelligence Oversight Training" (OVSC1000). This course provides training to all employees in order to maintain a high degree of sensitivity to, and understanding of the intelligence-related laws, regulations, and policies associated with the protection of U.S. person privacy rights during mission operations.
- (U) Many-Most contractors are required to take this course. However, it is not mandatory for all contractors and will depend on their assignment, duties, and the requirements of their controlling contract.
- (U) Students are familiarized with the major tenets of core_10 documents, including Directive_Type_Memorandum_(DTM) 08-052: "DoD Guidance for Reporting Questionable_Intelligence_Activities and Significant or Highly Sensitive Matters." The following are examples of guidance provided within the_OVSC1000 courses:

(U) If you become aware of a violation of the authorities, you should report it immediately. If you are unsure if a violation has been committed, consult with your manager, your organization's IO representative, or Compliance organization. You may also contact the NSA OGC or the NSA/CSS Office of the Inspector General or OIG for assistance.

(U) It is important for personnel to understand that for purposes of intelligence activities governed by E.O. 12333, DoD Regulation 5240.1-R contains the approved procedures for use within DoD. These procedures also reflect DoD policies for employee conduct that require you to be familiar with restrictions on the collection, retention and dissemination of U.S. person information and the responsibility to report questionable intelligence activities to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS IG.

(U) Employees shall report any questionable activity to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS OIG. A questionable activity is defined as any conduct that constitutes, or is related to, an intelligence activity that maybe unlawful or contrary to executive order, presidential directive, or applicable DoD policy. Employees may also report questionable activities directly to the DoD General Formatted: Fost: Not Rold Counsel or Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Intelligence Oversight, ATSD(LO). (U) DIRNSA is also responsible for ensuring that no adverse action is taken against an employee because the employee reports a questionable intelligence activity pursuant to the established procedures. In addition, DTM 08-052 contains specific requirements for reporting to the Parmatted: Font: Not Bold President's Intelligence Advisory Board questionable intelligence activities and significant or highly sensitive matters that could potentially impugn the reputation or integrity of the DoD intelligence Community or otherwise call into question the propriety of an intelligence activity. Should you need clarification or have questions about the reporting requirements for possible significant or highly sensitive matters, you should consult with your manager, your compliance Formatted: Font: Not Bold organization, the NSA OGC or the NSA/CSS OIG. (U) Report questionable or significant and highly sensitive intelligence activities to the NSA OGC Formatted: Font: Not Bold or NSA/CSS OIG. You can find contact information can be found in the Resources section. Formatted: Font: Not Bold (U) The OIG also issues agency-all messages covering policies and avenues for reporting suspected mismanagement and violations of law, policy, and regulations. The following is a recent example of a Senior Executive Message from Dr. George Ellard, NSA/CSS Inspector General (U) Within the Agency and the Federal Government, there are several avenues for reporting suspected mismanagement and violations of law, policy, and regulations. We recommend that you first try to resolve problems by bringing them to the attention of your leadership; managers are often in the best position to assess concerns, recognize process shortfalls, and take corrective action. (U//FOUC).If you believe that management has not been able to resolve your concerns, the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) can assist. NSA/CSS Policy 1-60 requires that NSA/CSS personnel report to the OIG possible violations of law, rules, or regulations; mismanagement; gross waste of funds; misconduct by senior officials; or abuse of authority. A complainant's Identity is protected by law, and NSA/CSS Policy 1-62 protects employees from reprisal for communications with the OlG. You can contact the OlG by telephone (963-5023), in person (OPS 287088), or anonymously through our Web site ("go IG"). (U) The Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act (ICWPA) allows employees to report "urgent concerns" to the Intelligence committees of Congress. A complaint made in accordance with the ICWPA ensures that your concerns are addressed and that classified (b) (5) information is protected. ICWPA complaints are made through the NSA/CSS OIG or the Department of Defense IG. (U) If you have questions about how to report a concern, go to the IG Web site ("go IG") or about problems involving that organization.

2. What are the mechanisms by which that reporting can occur?

(U//FOUG) The IG Act of 1978, as amended by the Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act (ICWPA), also provides contractors and employees of intelligence agencies a mechanism for reporting to Congress classified information alleging wrongdoing. An employee or contractor may provide information to the OIG anonymously, via phone, the OIG website, or in writing. Within NSA, employees and contractors may also raise concerns with offices as diverse as:

- the Associate Directorate for Security & Counterintelligence,
- . the Office of Equal Employment Opportunity & Diversity,
- the Office of the Director of Compliance,
- the Office of the General Counsel, and
- the Privacy and Civil Libertles Office.

3. What is the process, accountability for addressing such reports?

(U//FOUG) When an allegation is presented to the OIG or referred to them by another agency element, the OIG investigations Division reviews it to determine the appropriate action. Complaints regarding systemic process problems may be referred to the OIG Audit or intelligence Oversight Divisions. Concerns involving violations of law or policy are pursued via a preliminary inquiry, and if warranted, via an investigation, by the investigations Division. All complaints and their outcomes are tracked through the inspector General case management system.

If an inquiry is reported directly to Congress, the NSA OIG may not have knowledge of such a request.

4. is there a record of these kinds of inquiries and responses?

(U//FOUG) The OIG keeps a record of all inquiries and actions taken.

5. Do we have any examples of reported activity which resulted in corrective measures?

(U//FOUO)* Activity that is found to be a violation of law, directive, or policy requires some corrective action. NSA's incidents are most often tied to human error or technical malfunction that is corrected by local management within the capabilities of the existing systems in consultation with the OiG and senior leadership. As previously reported to the intelligence committees, the OiG is aware of thirteen instances of intentional misuse of the SIGINT system by individuals over the last 10 years. Most were referred to the Department of Justice, and eventually ended with the departure of the employee involved. Auditing and monitoring processes in the operational areas where many of these violations took place were significantly modified or improved.

(U/FOUO). Other than violations reported by OGC to the Department of Justice, we are not aware of any SIGINT programs or activities that are inconsistent with the law. Each quarter, the OIG and OGC review reported instances of non-compliance with SIGINT and Information Assurance authorities that are typically the result of human error or technical malfunction. These matters are addressed by local management or through other corrective actions taken by NSA's compliance organizations.

- 6. (OGC) Did we receive correspondence from Edward Snowden about his concerns?
- 7. (OGC) If so, in what form, on what dates and with what specificity as to content?
- 8. (OGC) Were his inquiries responded to? If so, how and when?
- (U) No such correspondence has been discovered.
- (U) NSA is unaware of any correspondence Edward Snowden had with the inspector General, the Office of General Counsel, or his supervisors wherein he expressed constitutional concerns about NSA's intelligence operations or authorities. We have found one instance of an e-mail inquiry to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of the content of some training material.
- (U) On Friday 5 April 2013 at about 4PM, Edward Snowden sent an email to the Office of General Counsel questioning the hierarchy of several NSA authorities Identified in a training course.
- (U) The inquiry did not raise any concerns with the substance of any particular statute, Executive Order, policy, or regulation.
- (U) The inquiry did not suggest that NSA was violeting any legal authority; nor did the inquiry question whether NSA had authority to conduct specific operations.
- (U) On Monday 8 April 2013, the next business day, the Office of General Counsel responded to his question and the attorney offered to discuss the issue further if he desired to do so There is no evidence that any additional correspondence or contact occurred on this matter.

10. (Q/TD) Was it exhaustive and authoritative?

(U//FOUO) . Given the importance of this issue and the repeated claims by Mr. Snowden, the effort to uncover any written or recollected evidence of these engagements has been thorough and involved cognizant authorities in each area of review.

11. (Q/TD) is it possible there is correspondence we overlooked, didn't record?

(U//FOUC) We cannot completely rule out the possibility that something may have been overlooked, but we have high confidence that the searches and interviews for relevant information we undertook	Formatted: Font: 11 pt would have uncovered evidence of assertions that rise to the level of outreach and protestation claimed by Mr. Snowden. They have not.

All.

(U//FOUO) Attached is the final version of the Question and Answer (Q&A) prep that was developed to support the release of the single Snowden-OGC email. Most of the material contained in this document was passed to public affairs offices and the White House Spokesperson for delivery to the press in the immediate hours after the email was released by NSA.

(U//FOUO)—Later, in an effort to archive and retain this information for future use, the Q&A was modified to reflect more of the background, facts, and procedures that implement the notification process at NSA that an employee is informed of, and expected to apply when reporting a potential problem or violation.

(U) This is a living document that can and should be modified as similar events warrant. For this initial document, the date/time stamp is 9 JUN 2014.

(U//FOUO) This document will be filed on the MLTF Sharepoint website under MLTF 1602. It will also be added to the "classified talking points" tab on the left side of the screen. While the majority of the material is written to an UNCLASS or U//FOUO level, there are selected items that push the document to CONFIDENTIAL/NOFORN.

(U) Attached is a copy for your records.

(U//FOUO) Reference Document: Q&A Prep for Snowden's Claim of Concerns and

Notification

Re:

(U) Executive Summary

(U//FOUO) Following the NBC interview with Edward Snowden broadcast on 28 MAY 14, the Intelligence Community decided to release the only email exchange known to exist at the time between Edward Snowden and the NSA Office of the General Counsel in which a basic question of legal precedence was asked and answered by an OGC lawyer. A Question & Answer paper was developed for US Government officials to provide background and unclassified talking points to support the release at news conferences and any potential follow-up questions. Selected portions of that paper were actually used by the public affairs offices at the White House and ODNI level.

(U/FOUO) As the event progressed the Q&A package was modified to become the paper that follows below. This new paper is intended to be a reference source for the event, or as a starting point should any further evidence come to light in the continuing investigation.

(U) Bolding and emphasis in this paper is primarily for the benefit of the reader, and is not required to be included in any formal responses to queries on these topics.

(U) The Trigger Event

(U) Edward Snowden has repeatedly claimed to have made attempts to express his concerns about the lawfulness of certain NSA activities to NSA colleagues, leadership, and through official channels. The following serves as an authoritative accounting of facts as relates to this claim and should be used as the basis for considering any responses related to these issues.

A. Did Snowden raise concerns with NSA as he said he did?

(U) We have found a single instance of one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The question was received and an answer was provided to Mr. Snowden. There was not additional follow-up noted. There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for evidence of outreach from him in those areas and have not discovered any engagements related to his claims. ((Note: This paragraph was publicly released via the White House Press office on 29 MAY 14))

B. How did NSA respond to the NBC FOIA request?

(U) NBC issued a FOIA request for any and all evidence that Edward Snowden had formally filed his concerns with Agency authorities. The FOIA request was being handled according to the normal process when it was overtaken by a decision on the part of the NSA Director to release the text of the one e-mail referenced above.

(U//FOUO) Shortly after noon on 28 May 2014, NSA provided the response to Question A. above, along with a redacted version of the one email inquiry. A copy of that redacted version is stored in MLTF Action folder 1602.

(U//FOUO) NSA contacted NBC the following week to close out the request and informed them that the one email that responded to their inquiry was now public record for all.

NSA Background to Potential Q&A Responses:

1. What is the training and awareness provided to government and contractor employees about reporting activities they perceive to be inconsistent with law and policies?

Training

(U) NSA/CSS provides training to all employees in order to maintain a high degree of sensitivity to, and understanding of the intelligence-related laws, regulations and policies associated with the protection of privacy rights during mission operations. Throughout the curriculum, the instruction repeatedly emphasizes the employee's responsibility to report questionable activity and the mechanisms to do so.

(U//FOUO) Selected courses are mandatory before an employee (civilian, military or contractor) can gain access to certain SIGINT operational systems. These specific training courses discuss the limitations of SIGINT authorities and mission operations to include reminders and guidance about who to contact with questions about scope of authorities, and who to contact if there are known or even potential compliance concerns.

The Basics -- OVSC1000

- (U) Below are examples from NSA's core Intelligence Oversight (IO) course "NSA/CSS Intelligence Oversight Training" (OVSC1000). This course provides training to all employees in order to maintain a high degree of sensitivity to, and understanding of the intelligence-related laws, regulations, and policies associated with the protection of U.S. person privacy rights during mission operations.
  - (U) Most contractors are required to take this course. However, it is not mandatory for all contractors and will depend on their assignment, duties, and the stipulations of their controlling contract. Snowden's role as a systems administrator supporting SIGINT operations, and later as an analyst-in-training in APR -MAY 2013 would clearly place him in the category of those required to complete OVSC1000.

If you are unsure if a violation has been committed, consult with your manager, your organization's IO representative, or Compliance organization. You may also contact the NSA OGC or the NSA/CSS Office of the Inspector General for assistance.
- (U) It is important for personnel to understand that for purposes of intelligence activities governed by E.O. 12333, DoD Regulation 5240.1-R contains the approved procedures for use within DoD. These procedures also reflect DoD policies for employee conduct that require you to be familiar with restrictions on the collection, retention and dissemination of U.S. person information and the responsibility to report questionable intelligence activities to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS IG.
- (U) Employees shall report any questionable activity to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS OIG. A questionable activity is defined as any conduct that constitutes, or is related to, an intelligence activity that maybe unlawful or contrary to executive order, presidential directive, or applicable DoD policy. Employees may also report questionable activities directly to the DoD General Counsel or Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Intelligence Oversight, ATSD(IO).
- (U) DIRNSA is also responsible for ensuring that no adverse action is taken against an employee because the employee reports a questionable intelligence activity pursuant to the established procedures. In addition, DTM 08-052 contains specific requirements for reporting to the President's Intelligence Advisory Board questionable intelligence activities and significant or highly sensitive matters that could potentially impugn the reputation or integrity of the DoD Intelligence Community or otherwise call into question the propriety of an intelligence activity. Should you need clarification or have questions about the reporting requirements for possible significant or highly sensitive matters, you should consult with your manager, your compliance organization, the NSA OGC or the NSA/CSS OIG.
- (U) Report questionable or significant and highly sensitive intelligence activities to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS OIG. You can find contact information can be found in the Resources section.

Awareness

(U/FOUO) NSA employees are provided information on how to report concerns regarding their work, or their work environment in a number of different venues to include formal training, briefings to large and small audiences, Agency static and electronic billboards and wall displays, and Agency-wide emails and announcements. All employees are made aware of how they may report concerns, even anonymously, within or outside their supervisory management chain. The relevant processes are reinforced in recurrent, mandatory training. Depending on the particular issue and individual circumstances, NSA employees may report concerns through many different avenues inside NSA, across the Executive Branch, and to Congress. The NSA OIG website provides information about submitting hotline complaints and addresses anonymity and confidentiality concerns.

(b)(3)-P.L. 86-36

 (U) Prior to the Snowden incident (pre-MAY 2013), the NSA OIG issued a number of agency-all messages summarizing investigation results of illegal activity and messages covering policies and avenues for reporting suspected mismanagement and violations of law, policy, and regulations. While not every IG report during this time frame dealt with intelligence matters, they all contained the following statement about the mission of the NSA OIG and how concerns can be reported:

The NSA Office of the Inspector General actively investigates allegations of fraud against the Agency. The OIG is committed to eliminating fraud, waste, mismanagement of Agency resources, and abuse of authority. If you are aware of potential fraud, waste, or abuse, please report your concern to the OIG by visiting the Hotline office in 2B7088, calling 963-5023, or visiting the OIG Hotline website. You may remain anonymous when submitting concerns to the OIG Hotline. If you choose not to remain anonymous, your identity will be protected.

- (U) After MAY 2013 and the issuance of NSA/CSS Policy 1-60, the IG issued a specific message addressing reporting policies and how to submit concerns in JUN 2013 and repeated this message in 2014.
  - (U) Within the Agency and the Federal Government, there are several avenues for reporting suspected mismanagement and violations of law, policy, and regulations. We recommend that you first try to resolve problems by bringing them to the attention of your leadership; managers are often in the best position to assess concerns, recognize process shortfalls, and take corrective action.
  - (U/FOUO) If you believe that management has not been able to resolve your concerns, the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) can assist. NSA/CSS Policy 1-60 requires that NSA/CSS personnel report to the OIG possible violations of law, rules, or regulations; mismanagement; gross waste of funds; misconduct by senior officials; or abuse of authority. A complainant's identity is protected by law, and NSA/CSS Policy 1-62 protects employees from reprisal for communications with the OIG. You can contact the OIG by telephone (963-5023), in person (OPS 2B7088), or anonymously through our Web site ("go IG").
  - (U) The Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act (ICWPA) allows employees to report "urgent concerns" to the intelligence committees of Congress. A complaint made in accordance with the ICWPA ensures that your concerns are addressed and that classified information is protected. ICWPA complaints are made through the NSA/CSS OIG or the Department of Defense IG.

2. What are the mechanisms by which that reporting can occur?

(U//FOUO) There are various mechanisms by which reporting can occur. Employees and contractors may provide information to the DoD OIG, IC OIG, NSA OIG anonymously, the OIG website via phone, in writing or to various offices within NSA such as:

- the Office of Equal Employment Opportunity & Diversity,
- · the Office of the Director of Compliance,
- · the Office of the General Counsel, and
- · the Privacy and Civil Liberties Office.
- the Associate Directorate for Security & Counterintelligence
- (U) The IG Act of 1978, as amended by the Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act (ICWPA), also provides contractors and employees of intelligence agencies a mechanism for reporting to Congress classified information alleging wrongdoing. Employees may contact the intelligence committees directly only if the employee
  - before making such a contact, furnishes to the head of the establishment, through the Inspector General, a statement of the employee's complaint or information and notice of the employee's intent to contact the intelligence committees directly; and
  - b) obtains and follows from the head of the establishment, through the Inspector General, direction on how to contact the intelligence committees in accordance with appropriate security practices.
  - 3. What is the process, accountability for addressing such reports?

(U/FOUO) When an allegation is presented to the NSA OIG or referred to them by an internal agency element, the OIG Investigations Division reviews it to determine the appropriate action. The NSA OIG also responds to referrals from external agencies when appropriate. Complaints regarding systemic process problems may be referred to the OIG Audit or Intelligence Oversight Divisions. Concerns involving violations of law or policy are pursued via a preliminary inquiry, and if warranted, via an investigation, by the Investigations Division. All complaints and their outcomes are tracked through the Inspector General case management system.

(U) If an inquiry is reported directly to Congress and a copy is not provided to Agency authorities (see Question 2 above), then the NSA OIG may not have knowledge of such a request.

4. Is there a record of these kinds of inquiries and responses?

(U//FOUO) The NSA OIG keeps a record of all inquiries and actions taken.

5. Do we [NSA] have any examples of reported activity which resulted in corrective measures?

(U//FOUO) Activity that is found to be a violation of law, directive, or policy is thoroughly reviewed to determine corrective action. NSA's incidents are most often tied to human error or technical malfunction that is corrected by local management within the capabilities of the existing systems in consultation with the NSA OIG and senior leadership. As of JUN 2014 and as previously reported to the intelligence committees, the OIG is aware of thirteen instances of intentional misuse of the SIGINT system by individuals over the last 10 years. Most were referred to the Department of Justice, and eventually ended with the departure of the employee involved. Auditing and monitoring processes in the operational areas where many of these violations took place were significantly modified or improved.

(U//FOUO) Other than violations reported by NSA OGC to the Department of Justice, we are not aware of any SIGINT programs or activities that are inconsistent with the law. Each quarter, the NSA OIG and OGC review reported instances of non-compliance with SIGINT and Information Assurance authorities that are typically the result of human error or technical malfunction. These matters are addressed by local management or through other corrective actions both directed by, and in concert with NSA's compliance organizations.

- 6. Did we receive correspondence from Edward Snowden about his concerns?
- 7. If so, in what form, on what dates and with what specificity as to content?
- 8. Were his inquiries responded to? If so, how and when?
- (U) No such correspondence has been discovered.
- (U) NSA is unaware of any correspondence Edward Snowden had with the NSA Inspector General, the Office of General Counsel, or his supervisors wherein he expressed constitutional concerns about NSA's intelligence operations or authorities. We have found one instance of an e-mail inquiry to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of the content of some training material.

(U) On Friday 5 April 2013 at about 4PM, Edward Snowden sent an email to the Office of General Counsel questioning the hierarchy of several NSA authorities identified in a training course.

- (U) The inquiry did not raise any concerns with the substance of any particular statute, Executive Order, policy, or regulation.
- (U) The inquiry did not suggest that NSA was violating any legal authority; nor did the inquiry question whether NSA had authority to conduct specific operations.
- (U) On Monday 8 April 2013, the next business day, the Office of General Counsel responded to his question and the attorney offered to discuss the issue further if he desired to do so There is no evidence that any additional correspondence or contact occurred on this matter.

9. How was our search for any correspondence from him conducted?

(U#FOUO) As of JUN 2014, the investigation was still ongoing. We have reviewed all of the email and NSANet social media posts authored by Edward Snowden which we have been able to obtain. This review has included manual reviews of his email and posts, as well as searches of that email tailored to identify any responsive correspondence.

(U//FOUO) We have located additional email between Snowden and members of Office of General Counsel and Oversight and Compliance relating to his job duties and work on troubleshooting IT issues, but these emails do not contain any questions or concerns about the legal authorities under which NSA operates.

10. Was it exhaustive and authoritative?

(U//FOUO). Given the importance of this issue and the repeated claims by Mr. Snowden, the effort to uncover any written or recollected evidence of these engagements has been thorough and involved cognizant authorities in each area of review.

11. Is it possible there is correspondence we overlooked, didn't record?

(U/TOUO) We cannot completely rule out the possibility that something may have been overlooked, but we have high confidence that the searches and interviews for relevant information we undertook would have uncovered evidence of assertions that rise to the level of outreach and protestation claimed by Mr. Snowden. They have not.

(U). Edward Snowden, in his own words, claims to have made several attempts to express his concerns to NSA colleagues, leadership, and official channels regarding NSA's authority and legal basis for conducting certain SIGKNT activities. The following serves as potential responses to anticipated questions from Congress, the press or the public as it relates to those claims.

Framing questions: Responses provided to the White House PAO the morning of 28 MAY 14

A. Did Snowden raise concerns with NSA as he said he did?

B. How do you plan to respond to the FOIA request?

- (U) We received the request from NBC this week and are following normal procedures for processing the request.
- (U) Shortly after Noon on 28 MAY, NSA-released the paragraph in A above and a redacted version of the one email inquiry. In the afternoon, several news services ran stories on this email release and its relation to the NBC interview, many posing questions about the validity of snowden's claims:

(U//FOUO): NSA will contact NBC to inform them that the release of the email constitutes the Agency's response to their FOIA request:

Potential Q&A Responses:

1. What is the training and awareness provided to gov't and contractor employees about reporting activities they perceive to be inconsistent with law or ethics?

(U//FOUO) The NSA OIG also provides briefings to various NSA training classes, including the new hire orientation class, mid-level leadership classes, and other classes specific to skill communities, such as contracting. - (U) The OIG also issues agency-ali messages covering policies and avenues for reporting suspected mismanagement and violations of law, policy, and regulations. The following is a recent example of a Senior Executive Message from Dr. George Eliard, NSA/CSS Inspector General:
  - (U) Within the Agency and the Federal Government, there are several avenues for reporting suspected mismanagement and violations of law, policy, and regulations. We recommend that you first try to resolve problems by bringing them to the attention of your leadership; managers are often in the best position to assess concerns, recognize process shortfalls, and take corrective action.
  - (U//FOUO) If you believe that management has not been able to resolve your concerns, the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) can assist. NSA/CSS Policy 1-60 requires that NSA/CSS personnel report to the OIG possible violations of law, rules, or regulations; mismanagement; gross waste of funds; misconduct by senior officials; or abuse of authority. A complainant's identity is protected by law, and NSA/CSS Policy 1-62 protects employees from reprisal for communications with the OIG. You can contact the OIG by telephone (963-5023), in person (OPS 2B7088), or anonymously through our Web site ("go IG").
  - (U) The Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act (ICWPA) allows employees to report "urgent concerns" to the intelligence committees of Congress. A complaint made in accordance with the ICWPA ensures that your concerns are addressed and that classified information is protected. ICWPA complaints are made through the NSA/CSS OIG or the Department of Defense IG.

(U) If you have questions about how to report a concern,	go to the IG Web site ("go IG") or
contact the IG H otline (ighotline@nsa.ic.gov) on NSANet.	. Contact the U.S. Cyber Command IG about problems involving that organizat	ion.

2. What are the mechanisms by which that reporting can occur?

(U//FOUO) The IG Act of 1978, as amended by the Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act (ICWPA), also provides contractors and employees of intelligence agencies a mechanism for reporting to Congress classified information alleging wrongdoing. An employee or contractor may provide information to the OIG anonymously, via phone, the OIG website, or in writing. Within NSA, amployees and contractors may also raise concerns with offices as diverse as

3. What is the process, accountability for addressing such reports?

(U//FOUO) When an allegation is received by the OIG Investigations Division reviews it to determine the appropriate action. Complaints regarding systemic process problems may be referred to the OIG Audit or Intelligence Oversight Divisions. Concerns involving violations of law or policy are pursued via a preliminary inquiry, and if warranted, via an investigation, by the Investigations Division. All complaints and their outcomes are tracked through the Inspector General case management system. If an inquiry is reported directly to Congress, the NSA OIG may not have knowledge of such a request.

4. Is there a record of these kinds of inquiries and responses?

(U//FOUO) The OIG keeps a record of all inquiries and actions taken.

5. Do we have any examples of reported activity which resulted in corrective measures?

(u//FOXA)—Technically speaking, all reported activity that is found to be a violation of law, directive, or policy requires some corrective action. Most of NSA's issues are often field to human error or technical maifunction that is corrected by local management within the capabilities of the existing systems in consultation with the OIG and senior leadership. One particular category of violations which required a corrective measure to be put in place is publically known as Love NT. As previously reported to the intelligence committees, the OIG is aware of thirteen instances of intentional misuse of the SIGINT system by individuals over the last 10 years. Most were referred to the Department of Justice, and eventually ended with the departure of the employee involved. Auditing and monitoring processes in the operational areas where many of these violations took place were significantly modified or improved.

(U//FOUG)- Other than violations reported by OGC to the Department of Justice, we are not aware of any SIGINT programs or activities that are inconsistent with the law. Additionally, each quarter, the OIG and OGC review reported instances of non-compliance with SIGINT and Information Assurance authorities that are typically the result of human error or technical malfunction. These matters are addressed by local management or through other corrective actions taken by NSA's compliance organizations.

8. (OGC) Were his inquiries responded to? If so, how and when?

- (U) No such correspondence has been discovered.
- (U) NSA is unaware of any correspondence Edward Snowden had with the Inspector General, the Office of General Counsel, or his supervisors wherein he expressed constitutional concerns about NSA's intelligence operations or authorities. We have found one instance of an e-mail inquiry to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed.
- (U) On Friday 5 April 2013 at about 4PM, Edward Snowden sent an email to the Office of General Counsel questioning the hierarchy of several NSA authorities identified in a training course.
- (U) The inquiry did not raise any concerns with the substance of any particular statute, Executive Order, policy, or regulation.
- (U) The inquiry did not suggest that NSA was violating any legal authority; nor did the inquiry question whether NSA had authority to conduct specific operations.
- (U) On Monday 8 April 2013, the next business day, the Office of General Counsel responded to his question and the attorney offered to discuss the issue further if he desired to do so There is no evidence that any additional correspondence or contact occurred.

10. (Q/TD) Was it exhaustive and authoritative?

(U) Edward Snowden has repeated claimed to have made—attempts to express his concerns about the lawfulness of certain NSA activities to NSA colleagues, leadership, and through official channels. The following serves as an authoritative accounting of facts as relates to this claim and should be used as the basis for considering any responses related to these issues.

Framing questions Framing questions

A. Did Snowden raise concerns with NSA as he said he did?

(U) We have found a single instance of one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The question was received and an answer was provided to Mr. Snowden. There was not additional follow-up noted. There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for evidence of outreach from him in those areas and have not discovered any engagements related to his claims. ((Note: This paragraph was publicly released via the White House Press office on 29 MAY 14))

B. How did NSA respond to the NBC FOIA request?

(U) The FOIA request was being handled according to the normal process when it was overtaken by a decision on the part of the NSA Director to release the text of the one e-mail referenced above.

(U/FOUO) Shortly after noon on 28 May 2014, NSA provided the paragraph in response A, above along with a redacted version of the one email inquiry. The copy of that redacted version is stored in MLTF Action folder 1602.

(U//FOUG) NSA contacted the FOIA originator NBC to close out the request.

NSA Background to Potential Q&A Responses:

- What is the training and awareness provided to government and contractor employees about reporting activities they perceive to be inconsistent with law and policies?
- (U) The NSA/CSS Comprehensive Mission Compliance Program provides training to all employees in order to maintain a high degree of sensitivity to, and understanding of the intelligence-related laws, regulations and policies associated with the protection of privacy rights during mission operations. Throughout the curriculum, the instruction repeatedly emphasizes the employee's responsibility to report questionable activity and the mechanisms to do so.

(U//FOUG) NSA encourages employees to report concerns regarding their work or work environment in a number of different venues to include formal training, briefings to large and small audiences, Agency static and electronic biliboards and wall displays, and Agency-wide emails and announcements. All employees are made aware of how they may report concerns, even anonymously, within or outside their supervisory management chain. The relevant processes are reinforced in recurrent, mandatory training. Depending on the particular issue and individual circumstances, NSA employees may report concerns through many different avenues inside NSA, across the Executive Branch, and to Congress. The NSA OIG website provides information about submitting hotline complaints and addresses anonymity and confidentiality concerns.

(U//FOUO) The NSA OIG also provides briefings to various NSA training classes, including the new hire orientation class, mid-level leadership classes, and other classes specific to skill communities, such as contracting.

(U//FOUG) Selected courses are mandatory before an employee (civilian, military or contractor) can gain access to certain SIGINT operational systems. These specific training courses discuss the limitations of SIGINT authorities and mission operations to include reminders and guidance about who to contact with questions about scope of authorities and who to contact if there are known or even potential compliance concerns.

- (U) Below are examples from NSA's core Intelligence Oversight (IO) course "NSA/CSS Intelligence Oversight Training" (OVSC1000). This course provides training to all employees in order to maintain a high degree of sensitivity to, and understanding of the intelligence related laws, regulations, and policies associated with the protection of U.S. person privacy rights during mission operations.
- (U) Many contractors are required to take this course. However, it is not mandatory for all contractors and will depend on their assignment, duties, and the requirements of the stipulations of their controlling contract.
- (U) Students are familiarized with the major tenets of IO documents, including DTM 08-052: "DoD Guidance for Reporting Questionable intelligence Activities and Significant or Highly Sensitive Matters." The following are examples of guidance provided within OVSC1000 course:
  - (U) If you become aware of a violation of the authorities, you should report it immediately . If you are unsure if a violation has been committed, consult with your manager, your organization's IO representative, or Compliance organization . You may also contact the NSA OGC or the NSA/CSS Office of the Inspector General or OIG for assistance.
  - (U) It is important for personnel to understand that for purposes of intelligence activities governed by E.O. 12333, DoD Regulation 5240.1-R contains the approved procedures for use within DoD. These procedures also reflect DoD policies for employee conduct that require you to be familiar with restrictions on the collection, retention and dissemination of U.S. person information and the responsibility to report questionable intelligence activities to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS IG.
  - (U) Employees shall report any questionable activity to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS OIG. A questionable activity is defined as any conduct that constitutes, or is related to, an intelligence UNCLASSIFIED/#FOR-OFFICIAL USE ONLY activity that maybe unlowful or contrary to executive order, presidential directive, or applicable DoD policy. Employees may also report questionable activities directly to the DoD General Counsel or Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Intelligence Oversight, ATSD(1 O).

(U) DIRNSA is also responsible for ensuring that no adverse action is taken against an employee because the employee reports a questionable intelligence activity pursuant to the established procedures. In addition, DTM 08-052 contains specific requirements for reporting to the President's Intelligence Advisory Board questionable intelligence activities and significant or highly sensitive matters that could potentially impugn the reputation or integrity of the DoD intelligence Community or otherwise call into question the propriety of an intelligence activity. Should you need clarification or have questions about the reporting requirements for possible significant or highly sensitive matters, you should consult with your manager, your compliance organization, the NSA OGC or the NSA/CSS OIG.

(U) Report questionable or significant and highly sensitive intelligence activities to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS OIG. You can find contact information can be found in the Resources section.

(U) The OIG also issues agency-all messages covering policies and avenues for reporting suspected mismanagem ent and violations of law, policy, and regulations. The following is a recent example of a Senior Executive Message from Dr. George Ellard, NSA/CSS Inspector General

NSA/CSS Policy 1-60 requires that NSA/CSS personnel report to the OIG possible violations of law, rules, or regulations; mismanagement; gross waste of funds; misconduct by senior officials; or abuse of authority. A complainant's identity is protected by law, and NSA/CSS Policy 1-62 protects employees from reprisal for communications with the OIG. You can contact the OIG by telephone (963-5023), in person (OPS 2B7088), or anonymously through our Web site ("go IG").
- (U) The Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act (ICWPA) allows employees to report "urgent concerns" to the intelligence committees of Congress. A complaint made in accordance with the ICWPA ensures that your concerns are addressed and that classified information is protected. ICWPA complaints are made through the NSA/CSS OIG or the Department of Defense IG.

	(U) If you have questions about how to report a concern, go to the IG Web site ("go IG") or contact the IG Hotline (Ighotline@nsa.ic.gov) on NSANet. Contact the U.S. Cyber Command IG about problems involving that organization.

2) What are the mechanisms by which that reporting can occur?

- 3) What is the process, accountability for addressing such reports?
  (U//FOUO) When an allegation is received by the OIG, the OIG Investigations Division reviews it to determine the appropriate action. Complaints regarding systemic process problems may be referred to the OIG Audit or Intelligence Oversight Divisions. Concerns involving violations of law or policy are pursued via a preliminary inquiry, and if warranted, via an investigation, by the investigations Division. All complaints and their outcomes are tracked through the inspector General case management system. If an inquiry is reported directly to Congress, the NSA OIG may not have knowledge of such a request.
  - 4) Is there a record of these kinds of inquiries and responses?

(U//FOUO) The OIG keeps a record of all inquiries and actions taken.

- 5) Do we have any examples of reported activity which resulted in corrective measures?
- (U//FOUO) As previously reported to the intelligence committees, the OIG is aware of thirteen instances of intentional misuse of the SIGINT system by individuals over the last 10 years. Other than violations reported by OGC to the Department of Justice, we are not aware of any SIGINT programs or activities that are inconsistent with the law. Additionally, each quarter, the OIG and OGC review reported instances of non-compliance with SIGINT and Information Assurance authorities that are typically the result of human error or technical malfunction. These matters are addressed by local management or through other corrective actions taken by NSA's compliance organizations.
  - 6) Did we receive corresponded from Edward Snowden about his concerns?

(U//FOUO) The NSA/CSS Office of the Inspector General has no evidence that Edward Snowden filed a complaint with this office.

7) If so, in what form, on what dates and with what specificity as to content?

Per MLTF POC: The last three questions (9-11) are probably best suited to Q Group, or perhaps 1	TD. We have some standard language that has been used publically, but we believe Below is the statement that NSA made in DEC 2013, and has been the standard ever since:
"After extensive investigation, including interviews with his former NSA supervisors and	co-workers, we have not found any evidence to support Mr. Snowden's contention that he brought these matters to anyone's attention."9) How was our search for any correspondence from him conducted?

10) Was it exhaustive and authoritative?

11) Is it possible there is correspondence we overlooked, didn't record?

UNCLASSIFIED//FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY

(U) Edward Snowden has repeated claimed to have made—attempts to express his concerns about the lawfulness of certain NSA activities to NSA colleagues, leadership, and through official channels. The following serves as an authoritative accounting of facts as relates to this claim and should be used as the basis for considering any responses related to these issues.

(b)(3)-P.L.	86-1
(6)(5)

Framing questions

Framing	quest	ons

A. Did Snowden raise concerns with NSA as he said he did?

(U) We have found a single instance of one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The question was received and an answer was provided to Mr. Snowden. There was not additional follow-up noted. There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for evidence of outreach from him in those areas and have not discovered any engagements related to his claims. ((Note: This paragraph was publicly released via the White House Press office on 29 MAY 14))

B. How did NSA respond to the NBC FOIA request?

- (U) The FOIA request was being handled according to the normal process when it was overtaken by a decision on the part of the NSA Director to release the text of the one e-mail referenced above,
- (U/FOUG) Shortly after noon on 28 May 2014, NSA provided the paragraph in response A, above along with a redacted version of the one email inquiry. The copy of that redacted version is stored in MLTF Action folder 1802.

(U//FOUG) NSA contacted the FOIA originator NBC to close out the request.

NSA Background to Potential Q&A Responses:

- What is the training and awareness provided to government and contractor employees about reporting activities they perceive to be inconsistent with law and policies?
- (U) The NSA/CSS Comprehensive Mission Compliance Program provides training to all employees in order to maintain a high degree of sensitivity to, and understanding of the intelligence-related laws, regulations and policies associated with the protection of privacy rights during mission operations. Throughout the curriculum, the instruction repeatedly emphasizes the employee's responsibility to report questionable activity and the mechanisms to do so.

(b)(3)-P.L. 86-36 (b)(5)

UNCLASSIFIED//FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY

(U//FOUD) NSA encourages employees are provided information on how to report concerns regarding their work or work environment in a number of different venues to include formal training, briefings to large and small audiences, Agency static and electronic billboards and wall displays, and Agency-wide emails and announcements. All employees are made aware of how they may report concerns, even anonymously, within or outside their supervisory management chain. The relevant processes are reinforced in recurrent, mandatory training. Depending on the particular issue and individual circumstances, NSA employees may report concerns through many different avenues inside NSA, across the Executive Branch, and to Congress. The NSA OIG website provides information about submitting hotline complaints and addresses anonymity and confidentiality concerns.

(U)#FOUC) The NSA OIG also provides briefings to various NSA training classes, including the new hireorientation class, said-level leadership classes, and other classes specific to skill communities, such asconfronting.

(U//FOUO) Selected courses are mandatory before an employee (civilian, military or contractor) can gain access to certain SIGINT operational systems. These specific training courses discuss the limitations of SIGINT authorities and mission operations to include reminders and guidance about who to contact with questions about scope of authorities and who to contact if there are known or even potential compilance concerns.

- (U) Below are examples from NSA's core intelligence Oversight (IO) course "NSA/CSS Intelligence Oversight Training" (OVSC1000). This course provides training to all employees in order to maintain a high degree of sensitivity to, and understanding of the intelligence-related laws, regulations, and policies associated with the protection of U.S. person privacy rights during mission operations.
- (U) Many contractors are required to take this course. However, it is not mandatory for all contractors and will depend on their assignment, duties, and the requirements of the stipulations of their controlling contract.
- (U) Students are familiarized with the major tenets of IO documents, including DTM 08-052: "DoD Guidance for Reporting Questionable Intelligence Activities and Significant or Highly Sensitive Matters." The following are examples of guidance provided within OVSC1000 course:
  - (U) If you become aware of a violation of the authorities, you should report it immediately. If you are unsure if a violation has been committed, consult with your manager, your organization's 10 representative, or Compliance organization. You may also contact the NSA OGC or the NSA/CSS Office of the Inspector General or OIG for assistance.
  - (U) It is important for personnel to understand that for purposes of intelligence activities governed by E.O. 12333, DoD Regulation 5240.1-R contains the approved procedures for use within DoD. These procedures also reflect DoD policies for employee conduct that require you to be familiar with restrictions on the collection, retention and dissemination of U.S. person information and the responsibility to report questionable intelligence activities to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS IG.
  - (U) Employees shall report any questionable activity to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS OIG. A questionable activity is defined as any conduct that constitutes, or is related to, on intelligence UNCLASSIFIED//TOR-OFFICIAL USE ONLY- activity that maybe unlawful or contrary to executive order, presidential directive, or applicable DoD policy. Employees may also report questionable activities directly to the DoD General Counsel or Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Intelligence Oversight, ATSD(I O).

UNCLASSIFIED/ TON OFFICIAL USE ONLY

(U) DIRNSA is also responsible for ensuring that no adverse action is taken against an employee because the employee reports a questionable intelligence activity pursuant to the established procedures. In addition, DTM 08-052 contains specific requirements for reporting to the President's Intelligence Advisory Board questionable intelligence activities and significant or highly sensitive matters that could potentially impugn the reputation or integrity of the DoD intelligence Community or otherwise call into question the propriety of an intelligence activity. Should you need clarification or have questions about the reporting requirements for possible significant or highly sensitive matters, you should consult with your manager, your compliance organization, the NSA OGC or the NSA/CSS OIG.

(U) Report questionable or significant and highly sensitive intelligence activities to the NSA OGC or NSA/CSS OIG. You can find contact information can be found in the Resources section.

(U) The OIG also issues agency-all messages summarizing investigation results of illegal activity and also messages covering policies and avenues for reporting suspected mismanagement and violations of law, policy, and regulations. All messages contain similar statements about the mission of the OIG and how concerns can be reported. One example, Former NSA Employee Sentenced to 18 Months in Prison In Corruption Scheme, posted on 21 June 2011 describes the results of the investigation and includes the following statement.

IUI The NSA Office of the Inspector General actively investigates allegations of fraud against the Agency. The OIG is committed to eliminating fraud, waste, mismanagement of Agency resources, and abuse of authority. If you are aware of potential fraud, waste, or abuse, please report your concern to the OIG by visiting the Hotline office in 287088, calling 963-5023, or visiting the OIG Hotline website. You may remain anonymous when submitting concerns to the OIG fieldine. If you choose not to remain anonymous, your identity will be protected.

(1) The following is a recent example of a Senior Executive Message from Dr. George Ellard, NSA/CSS Inspector General specifically addressing the policies and how to submit concerns

(U) Within the Agency and the Federal Government, there are several avenues for reporting suspected mismanagement and violations of law, policy, and regulations. We recommend that you first try to resolve problems by bringing them to the attention of your leadership; managers are often in the best position to assess concerns, recognize process shortfalls, and take corrective action.

(U//FOUQ) If you believe that management has not been able to resolve your concerns, the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) can assist. NSA/CSS Policy 1-60 requires that NSA/CSS personnel report to the OIG possible violations of law, rules, or regulations; mismanagement; gross waste of funds; misconduct by senior officials; or abuse of authority. A complainant's identity is protected by law, and NSA/CSS Policy 1-62 protects employees from reprisal for communications with the OIG. You can contact the OIG by telephone (963-5023), in person (OPS 287088), or anonymously through our Web site ("go IG").

(U) The Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act (ICWPA) allows employees to report "urgent concerns" to the intelligence committees of Congress. A complaint made in accordance with the ICWPA ensures that your concerns are addressed and that classified information is protected. ICWPA complaints are made through the NSA/CSS OIG or the Department of Defense IG.

UNCLASSIFIED//FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY

(U) If you have questions about how to report a concern, go to the IG Web site ("go IG") or contact the IG Hotline (ighotline@nsa.ic.gov) on NSANet. Contact the U.S. Cyber Command IG about problems involving that organization.

(b)(3)-P.L. 86-36

2. What are the mechanisms by which that reporting can occur?

(U//FOUO). The IG Act of 1978, as amended by the Intelligence Community Whistleblower Protection Act (ICWPA), also provides contractors and employees of intelligence agencies a mechanism for reporting to Congress classified information alleging wrongdoing. An employee or contractor may provide information to the OIG anonymously, via phone, the OIG website, or in writing or directly to the Congressional intelligence committees. Within NSA, employees and contractors may also raise concerns with offices as diverse as:

- · the Associate Directorate for Security & Counterintelligence,
- the Office of Equal Employment Opportunity & Diversity,
- the Office of the Director of Compliance,
- · the Office of the General Counsel, and
- · the Privacy and Civil Liberties Office.

3. What is the process, accountability for addressing such reports?

(U//FOUO) When an allegation is presented to the OIG or referred to them by another agency element, the OIG investigations Division reviews it to determine the appropriate action. Complaints regarding systemic process problems may be referred to the OIG Audit or intelligence Oversight Divisions. Concerns involving violations of law or policy are pursued via a preliminary inquiry, and if warranted, via an investigation, by the investigations Division. All complaints and their outcomes are tracked through the inspector General case management system.

If an inquiry is reported directly to Congress, the NSA OIG may not have knowledge of such a request.

4. Is there a record of these kinds of inquiries and responses?

(U//FOUO) The OIG keeps a record of all inquiries and actions taken,

UNCLASSIFIED//FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY-

(b)(3)-P.L. 88-36 (b)(3)

UNCLASSIFIED/FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY

5. Do we have any examples of reported activity which resulted in corrective measures?

(U//FOUG) Activity that is found to be a violation of law, directive, or policy requires some corrective action. NSA's incidents are most often tied to human error or technical malfunction that is corrected by local management within the capabilities of the existing systems in consultation with the OIG and senior leadership. As previously reported to the intelligence committees, the OIG is aware of thirteen instances of intentional misuse of the SIGINT system by individuals over the last 10 years. Most were referred to the Department of Justice, and eventually ended with the departure of the employee involved. Auditing and monitoring processes in the operational areas where many of these violations took place were significantly modified or improved.

(U//TOUG)- Other than violations reported by OGC to the Department of Justice, we are not aware of any SIGINT programs or activities that are inconsistent with the law. Each quarter, the OIG and OGC review reported instances of non-compliance with SIGINT and Information Assurance authorities that are typically the result of human error or technical malfunction. These matters are addressed by local management or through other corrective actions taken by NSA's compliance organizations.

- 6. (OGC) Did we receive correspondence from Edward Snowden about his concerns?
- 7. (OGC) if so, in what form, on what dates and with what specificity as to content?
- 8. (OGC) Were his inquiries responded to? If so, how and when?
- (U) No such correspondence has been discovered.
- (U) NSA is unaware of any correspondence Edward Snowden had with the Inspector General, the Office of General Counsel, or his supervisors wherein he expressed constitutional concerns about NSA's intelligence operations or authorities. We have found one instance of an e-mail inquiry to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of the content of some training material.
- (U) On Friday 5 April 2013 at about 4PM, Edward Snowden sent an email to the Office of General Counsel questioning the hierarchy of several NSA authorities identified in a training course.
- (U) The inquiry did not raise any concerns with the substance of any particular statute, Executive Order, policy, or regulation.
- (U) The inquiry did not suggest that NSA was violating any legal authority; nor did the inquiry question whether NSA had authority to conduct specific operations.
- (U) On Monday 8 April 2013, the next business day, the Office of General Counsel responded to his question and the attorney offered to discuss the issue further if he desired to do so There is no evidence that any additional correspondence or contact occurred on this matter.

After hearing from different "products":	this AM and then speaking with at his suggestion, it appears we are really working a few

- 1. What does NSA know about all these questions. This is a factual document that is being prepared so that NSA has verification about what we know/don't know and what we did to get the answers.
- 2. The next product is a draft set of UNCLASSIFIED questions and answers that can be developed for Public Affairs to use to address inquiries about the Snowden's claims that he contacted various people within NSA to complain about specific issues. Obvsiously per the call this AM—the attached will serve as a starting point, but we may need to modify these a bit.
- 3. Finally, then, we might have additional Q and A that are more specific to the release of the email itself. These may be a subset of #2.

As I understand now, you have already reached out to the IG and Q. I am curious as it relates to Question #1—is this something that MLTF already has assembled or is this something that should be staffed to SV and or ADET?

Thanks,

  - A. NSA is unaware of any correspondence Edward Snowden has had with the Inspector General, the Office of General Counsel, or his supervisors where he expressed constitutional concerns about Intelligence operations or NSA authorities. (NSA has found a single instance of one e-mail inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed.

On Friday 5 April 2013 at about 4PM in the afternoon, it appears Mr. Snowden emailed questions to the Office of General Counsel about the precedence between federal statutes and an Executive Order, as well as the interplay of DoD and ODNI regulations.

The inquiry did not raise any concerns with the substance of any particular statute and Executive Order or DoD and DNI regulations. Nor did the inquiry question whether NSA had authority to conduct specific operations or raise concerns that NSA might be violating the constitution or any other law, regulation, or policy.

On Monday 8 April 2013, the next business day, the Office of General Counsel provided specific answers to the questions and the responding attorney offered to discuss the questions further. No additional correspondence has been identified.

WILLIAMS: and welcome back, as we enter our second half hour, as we continue to hear from edward snowden, part of a wide-ranging conversation taped a week ago in moscow, we have already heard some extraordinary things, but as you will see, he's not done yet

SNOWDEN: I'm doing this to serve my country. I'm still working for the government, being a patriot means knowing when to protect your country, if I could go anywhere in the world, that place would be home.

WILLIAMS: edward snowden's last posting was in hawaii. there he rented a house where he lived with his girlfriend and performed electronic surveillance for the nsa. it was said he took his last position to gain access to the final documents he wanted to steal and then leak.

how long prior to leaving hawaii did you start to say to yourself, I'm going to gather this, I'm going to put this away, I'm going to expose this?

SNOWDEN: I think given the ongoing investigation that something better not to get into in a news interview, but I would be happy to discuss this with the government.

WILLIAMS: what is the number? what's the closest you have come to estimating the number of documents?

SNOWDEN: i will say the 1.7 million documents figure that the intelligence community has been bandying about, the director of nsa himself keith alexander said just a week ago in the australian financial review, i believe, that they have no idea what documents were taken at all, their auditing was so poor, so negligent that any private contractor, not even an employee of the government could walk into the nsa building, take whatever they wanted, and walk out with it and they would never know, now, I think that's a problem, and I think that's something that needs to be resolved, people need to be held to account for, has it happened before? could it happen again?

WILLIAMS: what didn't you grab? was there a threshold?

SNOWDEN: right, I didn't want to take information that would basically be take then and thrown out in the press that would cause harm to individuals, that would cause people to die, that would put lives at risk, so a good gauge of what information was provided to the journalists is a representation of what you see in the press, now the nsa and the defense intelligence agency and some of these other organizations have claimed that lives are at risk, that all this military information was out there, that, you know, I took all this information about missiles and warheads and tanks, but we don't see any of that in the newspaper, we haven't seen any stories on that.

WILLIAMS: snowden turned over the secret documents to glenn greenwald and laura poitras, both of whom traveled to russia for our interview. In his book "no place to hide," greenwald discussed the moment he met snowden in hong kong.

what did you make of him?

GREENWALD: the initial impression was one of extreme confusion. I was expecting to meet someone in his 60s or 70s, someone very senior in the agency because I knew almost nothing about him prior to our arrival in hong kong.

SNOWDEN: It was a really intimidating moment. you know, it was the most real point of no return because the minute you start talking to a journalist as an intelligence officer on camera, there is really no going back from that. that's where it all comes together.

WILLIAMS: also, you had this tangible evidence. In effect he was saying to you if i wasn't legit, where else would i have gotten this?

GREENWALD: right, that was certainly a good start to establishing his credibility and his authenticity was the fact he was able to produce many thousands of documents from the most secretive agency of the world's most powerful but at the same time there were government, questions about the authenticity of the documents t providence, the motives that led to his taking them and what it was he would say when he identified himself to the world as the source.

WILLIAMS: by handing over the documents to journalists, snowden said he wanted to put some space between himself and what he himself stole are from government computers, he wanted others to break the stories and do the reporting and check to see which stories might cause undue harm.

SNOWDEN: and that's the reason that the journalists have been required by their agreement with me as the source, although they could obviously break that or do whatever they want, but I demanded that they agreed to consult with the government to make sure no individuals or specific harms could be caused by any of that reporting.

WILLIAMS: that includes nbc news which has reported on its own batch of snowden documents and has a reporting relationship with glenn greenwald.

SNOWDEN: when it comes to specific stories about the specific collection programs, about specific targets, these aren't decided by me. these are decided by newspapers.

WILLIAMS: you see the part of this and for a lay audience looking on, they know that this came from you, the bulk release to the journalists came from you, they are guessing that you had decisions to make within what you had access to, so then they hear you saying, I didn't put that out, the journalists did.

SNOWDEN: right, that's a fair question, anyone can second guess my judgment, again, i'm a human being, i could make mistakes, i could make the wrong call, but the reality is the situation determined that this needed to be told to the public.

WILLIAMS: to your knowledge, there is nothing in what you have handed over to the journalists materially damaging or threatening to the military or national security?

SNOWDEN: there is nothing that would be published that would harm the public interest, these are programs that need to be understood, that need to be known, that require deep background and context for research, they are difficult to report, but they are of critical public importance.

WILLIAMS: just for clarification here note that snowden didn't deny turning over military secrets. he asserted instead they wouldn't be published, another break, when we continue, how snowden justifies what he did.

(COMMERCIAL BREAK)

WILLIAMS: on the range between ticker tape parade entence, what do you think ought to happen to you if and when you return to the united states?

SNOWDE: these are things that no individual should empower themselves to really decide. you know, i'm going to give myself a parade, but neither am i going to walk into a jail cell to serve as a bad example for other people in government who see something happening, some violation of the tion who think they need to say something about it.

WILLIAMS: you hear often in the united states are why doesn't he come home and face the music?

SNOWDEN: it's a fair question, why doesn't he face charges? but it's also uninformed, because what has been lain against me aren't normal charges, they are extraordinary charges, we have seen more charges under the espionage act in the last administration than we have in all other administrations in american history, the espionage act provides anyone accused of it of no chance to make a public defense, you are not allowed to argue based on all the evidence in your favor because that evidence may be classified, even if the it is exculpatory, when people say why don't you face the music, I say you have to understand the music is not an open court and a fair trial.

WILLIAMS: what would you do if you had an alence with the president right now? what would you say?

SNOWDEN: I would leave advising the president to his advisers, that's -- I wouldn't presume to place myself on the level to be able to suggest what his course of action should be.

WILLIAMS: would you ask him if you could come home free and clear?

SNOWDEN: I think that's a decision he'll weigh and decide based on what he believes would serve the public interest. I think that's proper and appropriate.

WILLIAMS: In your mind though, are you blameless? have you done, as you look at this, just a good thing? have you performed, as you see it, a public service?

SNOWDEN: I think it can be both. I think the most important idea is to remember that there have been times throughout american history where what is right is not the same as what is legal, sometimes to do the right thing you have to break a law, and the key there is in terms of civil disobedience, you have to make sure that what you are risking, what you are bringing onto yourself doesn't serve as a detriment to anybody else, it doesn't hurt anybody else, if you are volunteering yourself to be used as a negative example, to spend a lifetime in prison rather than to spend a time in prison — a short period where you will come out, advocate, emerge stronger and inspire other people to resist these policieses, spolicies, are you doing good or bad?

WILLIAMS: legal sources tell nbc news that snowden's legal team has been in contact with the government's lawyers, but negotiations have t begun.

are you looking for clemency or amnesty? would you like to go home?

SNOWDEN: i don't think there has ever been any question that I wild like to go home. from day one I have said I'm doing this to serve my country. I'm still working for the government, now whether amnesty or clemency becomes a possibility is not for me to say, that's a debate for the public and the government to decide, but if I could go anywhere in the world, that place would be home.

BATES NO. 181
WILLIAMS: and when we continue, an american in russia. edward snowden talks about what his life is like now in exile and how he feels about coming home.

(COMMERCIAL BREAK)

WILLIAMS: this is a big cultural change, you, in effect, moved to russia from hawaii, what is your life like?

SNOWDEN: you know, it's — it is a major cultural gap. it requires adjustment, but even though I didn't choose to be here, even though, you know, circumstances really trapped me here, I can adapt. I can live life as an american more or less, that's the beauty of the internet, we are no longer tied to our communities merely by, you know, miz call physical connections, right now i'm watching a show, "the wire." I'm really enjoying it, second season, not so great, but —

WILLIAMS: what do you make of the fact that president putin's standing in the world, let's say, has changed so dramatically during the time you have been here?

SNOWDEN: it's really frustrating for someone who is working so hard to expand the domain of our rights and our privacy to end up stuck in a place where those rights are being challenged in ways that i would consider deeply unfair, the recent bloggers' registration law in russia, i can't think of any basis for a law like that, not just in russia, but any country, the government shouldn't regulate the operations of a free press whether it is nbc or some blogger in their living room, there is so much that needs to be defended here in russia, but i am limited by my inability to speak russian and so on that it's an isolating and frustrating thing, i really hope that russia, the united states and many other countries will work to push back against this constantly increasing surveillance, this constant erosion and abrasion of public rights.

WILLIAMS: correct me if i'm wrong, the arc of your life is you went from signing up for the military of after 9/11, in effect saying you were willing to die for your country to then telling people you half expected to die via abduction or assassination after what you have done in this instance, that's a pretty dramatic arc since 2003, 2004.

SNOWDEN: I think that's actually a solid representation of the dramatic arcses sthat have happened within our government in the same period, do you think our government has changed since 9/11? have the policies changed? has civil engagement with the government changed? have our politics changed? are things radically different in terms of partisanship? there have been radical changes within our government.

WILLIAMS: do you see yourself as a patriot?

SNOWDEN: I do. you know, I think patriot is a word that's thrown around so much that it can be devalued nowadays, but being a patriot doesn't mean prioritizing service to government above all else, being a patriot means knowing when to protect your country, knowing when to protect your countrymen from the violations of and encroachments of adversaries and those adversaries don't have to be foreign countries, they can be bad policies, they can be officials who, you know, need a little bit more accountability, they can be mistakes of government and simple overreach and things that should never have been tried or that went wrong.

WILLIAMS: did you say earlier you were still serving your government?

SNOWDEN: yes.

WILLIAMS: how so?

SNOWDEN: when you look at the actions that I have taken, when you look at the carefulness of the program ares that have been disclosed, when you look at the way this has been filtered through the most trusted journalistic institutions in america, the way the government has had a chance to chime in on this and to make their case, and when you look at the changes that it's resulted in, we have had the first open federal court to ever review these programs declare it likely unconstitutional and orwellian and you see congress agreeing that massive surveillance, bulk collection needs to end.

with all of these things happening thatheovernment agrees all the way up to the president, again, make us stronger how can it be said that i did not serve my government? how can it be said that this harmed the country when all three branches of government have made reforms as a result?

WILLIAMS: many in government say snowden should say for what he's done whether or not he comes home.

what do you miss about home?

SNOWDEN: I think the only — the only answer to something like that for somebody in my situation is, you know, what don't i miss? what would you miss? what wouldn't you miss? I miss my family. I miss my home. I miss my colleagues. I miss the work, because caught up in all these issues, people have unfairly demonized the nsa to a point that's too extreme, these are good people trying to do hard work for good reasons, the problem that we are confronted with, the challenge that we are facing is not the working level guy, some mustache-twirling villain out to destroy your life, it's the fact that senior officials are investing themselves with powers that they are not entitled to, and they are doing it without asking the public for any kind of consent.

WILLIAMS: is what I heard you feeling bad for the damage to the nsa as a result of what you have exposed from the nsa?

SNOWDEN: well, what you need to understand in what i was saying -- I guess not what you need to understand, but what i'm saying is not damage to the nsa. it's the sort of conspiratorial that can emerge when there are abuses that le this they can do no good and the government has legitimate programs and purposes and they can do great things, the nsa can as well, i think it's important to remember that people don't set their lives on fire, they don't say good-bye to their families, actually pack up without saying good-bye to their families, they don't walk away from their extraordinary comfortable lives. I made a lot of money for a guy with no high school diploma, and burn down everything they love for no reason.

WILLIAMS: so you're a kid from north carolina and while i, after this interview, am free to fly back to the united states, you can't, does that hurt you?

SNOWDEN: I think no american could be prohibited from coming home or traveling anywhere else without feeling a sense of loss, but, again, I may have lost my ability to travel, but I have gained the ability to go to sleep at night, put my head on the pillow and feel comfortable that I have done the right thing even when It was the hard thing, I'm comfortable with that.

WILLIAMS: a good number of americans, of course, feel that because of what they see as an act of treason, they sleep less soundly at night fearing this massive leak of secrets has endangered the country. there is more on the way, glenn greenwald says the next story he is going to public based on the snowden documents may be the biggest yet in terms of impact, that is our broadcast for tonight, we're going to keep going in the studio to ask the question, in part to take on the same question is snowden a hero or a traitor? we have assembled correspondents and former government officials.

BRIAN WILLIAMS; good evening, I'm brian williams, he is routinely called the most wanted man in the world, last week in moscow, cloaked in secrecy and after months of behind-the-scenes back and forth, we sat down with edward snowden for his first american television interview, let's begin with a reminder of what this 30-year-old has done and why he's living in exile overseas, wanted for espionage in this country, the classified documents he stole, downloaded from the nsa and handed over to journalists blew the lid off data mining programs that had been launched in the wake of and in the name of 9/11, they have names like prism and boundless informant and xkeyscore, some of them designed to vacuum up phone and internet data are from companies like verizon and google and apple and vahoo! and some of them could zero in on any one of us, snowden came to this interview armed with talking points, ready to tell his story. he knew he would be receiving no compensation and no question was off limits, already just today based on prereleased snippets of what you're about to see secretary of state john kerry launched a full-on fredricton it willontal assault on snowden calling him a traitor, challenging hill to come home to face justice, we'll hear what edward snowden has to say about that, he arrived alone carrying only a backpack into our moscow hotel, he came up a back stairway into the elevator, the moment he sat down and our camera focused on him, it became clear that this was the first good long look at him the world had had, we saw him framed against the hotel window in hong kong and appearing from undisclosed locations on closed circuit video, he was here now, introducing himself as ed. a lot of people say you have badly damaged your country.

EDWARD SNOWDEN: can you show that? is there any dman vagsemonstration? I have been asking for a year now. if after a year they can't show a single individual who has been harmed in any way by this reporting, is it really so grave? is it really so serious? can we really trust those claims without scrutinizing them? I would argue we can't, we should be open to them, it's fair, the possibility, if this has caused serious harm, I plirnly ould like to know about it.

WILLIAMS: keith alexander has said you have done, quote, significant and irreversible damage to the nation. he said there is, quote, concrete truth that terrorist groups and others are taking action and making changes and it's going to make our job tougher, and this amounts to telling our enemy our playbook.

SNOWDEN: so what's interesting is that we see the exact same language, the exact same accusations being levelled against whistleblowers, against any critic of any government program throughout history, throughout time.

WILLIAMS: what are you doing in russia?

SNOWDEN: all right, so this is a really fair concern, i personally am surprised that i ended up here, the reality is i never intended to end up in russia, i had a flight from cuba to latin america, the united states revoked my passport to trap me in the moscow airport, when people ask why are you in russia, i say please ask the state department.

WILLIAMS: the u.s. state department says snowden's passport was pulled before he boarded that flight to moscow and yet he was somehow still able to leave hong kong, a city he had chosen to fly to initially upon leaving the u.s. a formerly high ranking american official said if snowden's equivalent russlan kid was in our hands in the united states we would be working mightily to, a, befriend him and, absent that, infiltrate what hes has, what he knows, what has your relationship been to the host nation? have you met putin? have you spoken with him?

SNOWDEN: I have no relationship with the russian government at all. I have never met the russian president. I'm not supported by the raugs government -- russian government. I'm not taking money from the russian government. I'm not a spy, the best way to make sure, for example, the russians can't break my fingers and compromise information or hit me with a bag of money until I give them something was not to have it at all, the way to do it was by destroying material I was holding before I transited through russia.

WILLIAMS: people are going to find it hard to believe that president putin hasn't taken a run at you or what you know, you can state declaratively that that hasn't happened?

SNOWDEN: yeah. I mean, the way -- the way to think about this is, again, I already know how to deal with counterintelligence. beyond that, I took nothing to russia, so I could give them mothing.

WILLIAMS: you say you're not carrying around any of the materials, you are handing them off, if I gave you a laptop, could you access the documents?

SNOWDEN: no, no.

WILLIAMS: no, you couldn't remotely, electronically access material?

SNOWDEN: no. 1

WILLIAMS: it's gone from your control?

SNOWDEN: right. I don't have any control — let's put it this way. If I'm traveling through russia — and I know I'm traveling through russia and they have a very aggressive, very professional service, and I look like tweety bird to sylvester the cat, a little walking chicken leg with all the documents if I have control over that, that's a very dangerous thing for me.

WILLIAMS: we'll take our first break here, up next when we continue, the impact of 9/11 on edward snowden.

(COMMERCIAL BREAK)

WILLIAMS: going back almost a year to when this story first broke, edward snowden was defined early on, and not altogether accurately, the president famously called him a hacker, we in the news media passed along and repeated terms like systems analyst and outside contractor that didn't really mean all that much and according to snowden didn't really describe what he did for a living.

(VIDEO BEGINS)

WILLIAMS: how do you define yourself? are you -- were you trained as a spy? specifically i'm talking about the titles systems analyst, contractor, it seems to me spies probably look a lot more like ed snowden and a lot less like james bond these days.

SNOWDEN: well, it's no secret that the u.s. tends to get more and better intelligence out of computers nowadays than they do out of people. I was trained as a spy in sort of the traditional sense of the word. I lived and worked undercover, overseas pretending to work in a job that I'm not and even being assigned a name that was not mine. now the government might deny these things, frame it in certain ways and say, oh, he's a low level analyst but what they are trying to do is they are trying to use one position that I have had in a career here or there to distract from the totality of my experience which is that I have worked for the central intelligence agency undercover overseas. I have worked for the national security agency undercover overseas, and I have worked for the defense intelligence agency as a lecturer at the joint counterintelligence training academy where I developed sources and methods for keeping our information and people secure in the most hostile and dangerous environments around the world with, so when they say I'm a low level systems administrator that I don't know what I'm talking about it's somewhat misleading.

WILLIAMS: snowden said his life changed when he was still a teenager on the worst day in modern american history.

what did 9/11 mean to you?

SNOWDEN: I have never told anybody this, no journalist, but I was on ft. meade on septembeth right outside the nsa, so I remember -- I remember the tension on that day. I remember hearing on the radio, I remember thinking my grandfather who worked for the fbi at the time was in the pentagon when the plane hit it. I take the threat of terrorism seriously. I think we all do. I think it's really disingenuous for the government to invoke and sort of scandalize our memories, to sort of exploit the national trauma that we all suffered together and worked so hard to come through to yufjustify programs that are have never been shown to keep us safe but cost us liberties and freedoms that we don't need to give up, and our constitution says we should not give up.

WILLIAMS: then there is this way of looking at it — our nation had been attacked in this nonlinear way, we were hurting, post pearl harbor hurting, why not cast the widest net possible? innocent people around the country were — all felt the same way, I've got nothing to hide, we've got to find this enemy we can't see.

SNOWDEN: the definition of a security state is any nation that prioritizes security over all other considerations, i don't believe the united states is or ever should be a security state, if we want to be free we can't become subject to surveillance, we can't give away our privacy, we can't give away our rights, we have to be an active party, we have to be an active part of our government, and h say there are some things worth dying for, i think the country is one of them.

WILLIAMS: like a lot of young men in our country, and especially given the fact that your grandfather was at the fbi, your dad's a vet. like a lot of young men across america you wanted to join up, and you did.

SNOWDEN: in 2004, I joined the u.s. army under the 18 x-ray special forces recruit program. I have to give high respect to everyone many the military and the graduates of those programs, they are better men than i. i was injured very early on in the program and I washed out. I don't hide that.

WILLIAMS: snowden reportedly left the military after breaking both of his legs in training.

SNOWDEN: the fact is that i tried, you know, I saw what was going on in the world, I believed the government's arguments that we were going to do good things in Iraq, that we were going to free the oppressed, and I wanted to do my part to help share the national burden and create not just a better america but a better world, the problem was, as time went on, as I rose to higher and higher levels of the intelligence community, I gained more and more access, as I saw more classified information at the highest levels I realized that so many of the things that we are told by the government simply aren't true, much like the arguments about aluminum tubes and weapons of mass destruction, colin powell's discussion about anthrax is a dama — saddam was going to bring against us, the Iraq war I signed up for was launched on false premises, the american people were misled, whether that was due to bad faith or simply mistakes of intelligence, I can't say for sure, but I can say It shows the problem of putting too much faith in intelligence systems without debating them in public.

WILLIAMS: we'll take another break here, coming up, how edward snowden says the usa can reach into our lives via our phones.

(COMMERCIAL BREAK)

WILLIAMS: welcome back, government was now able, if they wanted to, to use our computers to reach into american lives and whatever you think of him, what edward snowden told us about spying on our data and our personal devices was chilling, and as an example, we used the phone in my hand.

(VIDEO BEGINS)

WILLIAMS: I want to ask you about this device, this is not my lphone, this is what drug dealers resort to, this is called a burner, it's a temporary, it's the one I brought to cover the olympics because our i.t. people told me that the russians are so good at infiltration, how good? and how good are the americans? what can the usa do with this device, if they wanted to get into my life?

SNOWDEN: so, first off, that's probably the most expensive burner i have ever seen, but i guess we are at the up market of drug dealers here

WILLIAMS: I'm using a term of art. this is turned off. it's inert.

SNOWDEN: the nsa, the russian intelligence service, the chinese intelligence service, any intelligence service in the world that has significant funding and a real technological research team can own that phone the minute it connects to their network, as soon as you turn it on, it can be theirs, they can turn it into a microphone, they can take pictures from it, they can take the data off of it, but it's important to understand that these things are typically done on a targeted basis, right? it's only done when people go, this phone is suspicious, i think it's being held by a drug dealer, i think it is being used by a terrorist.

WILLIAMS: can anyone turn it on remotely if it's off? can they turn on apps? did anyone know or care that I googled the final score of the rangers/canadiens game last night because I was traveling here?

SNOWDEN: i would say yes to all of those, they can absolutely turn them on with the power turned off the device, that's pretty scary, the thing about the rangers game ises also salso scary, you might say, does anybody care that I'm looking up the score for the rangers game? well, a government or a hacker or some other nefarious individual would say yes, that tells a lot about you, you probably speak english, you are probably an american, you are interested in this sport, they might know what your habits are, where were you in the world when you checked the score? do you check it when you travel? do you check it when you're at home? they could tell your pattern of life, when are you doing these activities? when do you wake up? when do you go to sleep? what other phones are around you? are you with someone who's not your wife? are you some place you shouldn't be, according to the government which is arbitrary, you know, are you engaged in any kind of activities we disapprove of, even if they aren't technically illegal? all of these things can raise your level of scrutiny, these activities can be mis misinterpreted and used to do you wrong, the problem is the capabilities themselves are unregulated, uncontrol are edun krol uncontrol uncontroledded and dangerous.

WILLIAMS: all because i googled rangers, canadiens, final score.

SNOWDEN: exactly.

WILLIAMS: snowden says he was astonished at the access he had at his fingertips including a computer program that, as he put it, could get inside your thought process.

SNOWDEN: when I think about an instance that really just struck me as, oh, my god, we can do this. and we can do it to anyone was that people at nsa, analysts, can actually watch people's internet communications. watch them draft correspondence and actually watch their thoughts form as they type. s as you write a message, an analyst at nsa or any service using this attack against people can actually see you write sentences and backspace over your mistakes, change the words, pause, and think about what you wanted to say and then change it. it's this extraordinary intrusion not just into your communications, your finished messages but your actual drafting process, into the way you think.

WILLIAMS: you must have been aware spying is sometimes called a dirty business. lives have been taken and unsavory deeds have been committed.

SNOWDEN: you know, I don't think anybody who 's's been in the intelligence community for almost a decade as I have been, is really shocked by the specific types of general operations when they are justified, what's more shocking for anybody is not the dirtiness of the business, it's the dirtiness of the targetsing, it's the dirtiness of the way these things are being used, it's the lack of respect for the public because — the lack of respect for the intrusiveness of surveillance.

WILLIAMS: when the president and others have made the point that you should have gone through channels, become a whistleblower and not pursued the route you did, what's your response?

SNOWDEN: I actually did go through channels, and that is documented, the nsa has records, they have copies of e-mails right now to their office of general counsel, to their oversight and compliance folks from me raising concerns about the nsa's interpretations of its legal authorities. I have raised the complaints not just officially in writing through e-mail to these offices and these individuals but to my supervisors, to my colleagues, in more than one office, I did it in ft. meade. I did it in hawaii, and many, many of these individuals were shocked by these programs, they had never seen them themselves, and the ones who had went, you know, you're right, these are things that are are really concerning, these aren't things we should be doing, maybe we're going too far here, but if you say something about this, they're going to destroy you, do you know what happens to people who stand up and talk about this?

WILLIAMS: what did you report? what was the response?

SNOWDEN: so i reported that there were real problems with the way the nsa was interpreting its legal authorities, and the response more or less in bureaucratyerreaucratic language was you should stop asking questions, one of my final acts in government was continuing one of these communications with a legal office, in fact, i am so sure that these communications exist that i have called on congress to write a letter to the nsa to verify that they do, write to the office of general counsel and say, did mr. snowden ever communicate any concerns about the nsa's interpretation of its legal authorities?

WILLIAMS: now about that last point there about the paper trail that snowden says exists within the nsa, so far nbc news has learned from multiple sources that snowden did, indeed, send at least one e-mail to the general counsel's office raisingic and legal questions, we have filed a request under the freedom of information act to look for any other records, and when we continue here tonight, the are the secrets of the u.s. military safe?

Last night Val provided a heads-up about an article in Vanity Fair. As you may be aware, excerpts of that article now appear on the web. In them, Edward Snowden is quoted as saying that he contacted "NSA's lawyers" and "oversight and compliance authorities" and "raised complaints" and "specifically expressed concerns " about "interpretation of the law." Against the backdrop of extensive searches, supported by investigative interviews, there was one brief email exchange between Mr. Snowden and the NSA Office of General Counsel in April 2013 seeking generic clarification about the hierarchy of certain legal and policy documents governing NSA's mission activities. The NSA Office of General Counsel responded promptly to Mr. Snowden's inquiry, provided clarification, and proactively offered to discuss further if Mr. Snowden desired. This email was identified in the immediate aftermath of the unauthorized disclosures in June of 2013. A copy is attached. The redactions are the names and identifying information of NSA personnel.

More generally, investigations by NSA and FBI have not yielded any evidence that Mr. Snowden expressed concerns or complaints, in email or any other form, about NSA's intelligence activities to anyone in a position of authority or oversight. We will continue to investigate any credible suggestion that this occurred, and will inform Congress of any additional information we find.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Hello Ed,

Executive Orders (E.O.s) have the "force and effect of law." That said, you are correct that E.O.s cannot override a statute.

In general, DOD and ODNI regulations are afforded similar precedence though subject matter or date could result in one having precedence over another.

Please give me a call if you would like to discuss further.

Message: Hello, I have a question regarding the mandatory USSID 18 training.

The training states the following:

(U) The Hierarchy of Governing Authorities and Documents is displayed from the highest authority to the lowest authority as follows:

U.S. Constitution
Federal Statutes/Presidential Executive Orders (EO)
Department of Defense (DoD) and Office of the Director of National Intelligence (ODNI) Regulations
NSA/CSS Directives and Policies
USSIDs
SID Management Directives and Policies
Office Policies

I'm not entirely certain, but this does not seem correct, as it seems to imply Executive Orders have the same precedence as law. My understanding is that EOs may be superseded by federal statute, but EOs may not override statute. Am I incorrect in this? Between EOs and laws, which have precedence?

Similarly, between DOD and ODNI regulations, which has greater precedence?

Could you please clarify?

Thank you very much,

Ed

To: National Security Agency Attn: FOIA/PA Office (DJ4)

This is a request for records under the Freedom of Information Act ("FOIA"), 5 U.S.C. § 552 and the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552a. This request should be considered under both statutes to maximize the release of records.

REQUESTER INFORMATION

Name: Jason Leopold

Address: 1669 Benedict Canyon Dr.

Beverly Hills, 90210

Email: jasonleopold@gmail.com

RECORDS SOUGHT

I request disclosure of any and all emails written by former NSA contractor Edward Snowden in which Mr. Snowden contacted agency officials through email to raise concerns about NSA programs.

ADDITIONAL DESCRIPTIVE INFORMATION

According to a report published on April 8, 2013 by Vanity Fair, Edward Snowden stated that he "raised complaints" to NSA.

Approved for Release by NSA on 07-28-2015, FOIA Case # 78137

"The N.S.A. at this point not only knows I raised complaints, but that there is evidence that I made my concerns known to the N.S.A.'s lawyers, because I did some of it through e-mail," Mr. Snowden said. "I directly challenge the N.S.A. to deny that I contacted N.S.A. oversight and compliance bodies directly via e-mail and that I specifically expressed concerns about their suspect interpretation of the law, and I welcome members of Congress to request a written answer to this question [from the N.S.A.]."

INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING SEARCH

- Instructions Regarding "Leads":
- As required by the relevant case law, the NSA should follow any leads it discovers during the conduct of its searches and perform additional searches when said leads indicate that records may be located in another system. Failure to follow clear leads is a violation of FOIA.
- Request for Public Records:Please search for any records even if they are already publicly available.
- 3. Request for Electronic and Paper/Manual Searches:
  I request that searches of all electronic and paper/manual indices, filing systems, and locations for any and all records relating or referring to the subject of my request be conducted.
- 4. Request for Additional Filing Systems, Indices, and Locations Searches: Please search all of your indices, filing systems, and locations, including those I have not specified by name and those of which I may not be aware.
- 5. Request regarding Photographs and other Visual Materials:
  I request that any photographs or other visual materials responsive to my request be released to me in their original or comparable forms, quality, and resolution. For example, if a photograph was taken digitally, or if the NSA maintains a photograph digitally, I request disclosure of the original digital image file, not a reduced resolution version of that image file nor a printout and scan of that image file. Likewise, if a photograph was originally taken as a color photograph, I request disclosure of that photograph as a color image, not a black and white image. Please contact me for any clarification on this point.
- Request for Duplicate Pages:

I request disclosure of any and all supposedly "duplicate" pages. Scholars analyze records not only for the information available on any given page, but also for the relationships between that information and information on pages surrounding it. As such, though certain pages may have been previously released to me, the existence of those pages within new context renders them functionally new pages. As such, the only way to properly analyze released information is to analyze that information within its proper context. Therefore, I request disclosure of all "duplicate" pages.

- 7. Request to Search Emails: Please search for emails relating to the subject matter of my request.
- 8. Regarding Destroyed Records:
  If any records responsive or potentially responsive to my request have been destroyed, my request include, but is not limited to, any and all records relating or referring to the destruction of those records. This includes, but is not limited to, any and all records relating or referring to the events leading to the destruction of those records.

INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING SCOPE AND BREADTH OF REQUESTS Please interpret the scope of this request broadly. The NSA is instructed to interpret the scope of this request in the most liberal manner possible short of an interpretation that would lead to a conclusion that the request does not reasonably describe the records sought.

EXEMPTIONS AND SEGREGABILITY

I call your attention to President Obama's 21 January 2009 Memorandum concerning the Freedom of Information Act, in which he states:

All agencies should adopt a presumption in favor of disclosure, in order to renew their commitment to the principles embodied in FOIA [....] The presumption of disclosure should be applied to all decisions involving FOIA.

In the same Memorandum, President Obama added that government information should not be kept confidential "merely because public officials might be embarrassed by disclosure, because errors and failures might be revealed, or because of speculative or abstract fears." Finally, President Obama ordered that "The Freedom of Information Act should be administered with a clear presumption: In the case of doubt, openness prevails."

Nonetheless, if any responsive record or portion thereof is claimed to be exempt from production, FOIA/PA statutes provide that even if some of the requested material is properly exempt from mandatory disclosure, all segregable portions must be released. If documents are denied in part or in whole, please specify which exemption(s) is (are) claimed for each passage or whole document denied. Please provide a complete itemized inventory and a detailed factual justification of total or partial denial of documents. Specify the number of pages in each document and the total number of pages pertaining to this request. For "classified" material denied, please include the following information: the classification (confidential, secret or top secret); identity of the classifier; date or event for automatic declassification or classification review or downgrading; if applicable, identity of official authorizing extension of automatic declassification or review past six years; and, if applicable, the reason for extended classification beyond six years.

In excising material, please "black out" the material rather than "white out" or "cut out." I expect, as provided by FOIA, that the remaining non-exempt portions of documents will be released.

Please release all pages regardless of the extent of excising, even if all that remains are the stationery headings or administrative markings.

In addition, I ask that your agency exercise its discretion to release records which may be technically exempt, but where withholding serves no important public interest.

ADDITIONAL INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING REQUEST Please produce all records with administrative markings and pagination included.

Please send a memo (copy to me) to the appropriate units in your office to assure that no records related to this request are destroyed. Please advise of any destruction of records and include the date of and authority for such destruction.

FORMAT

I request that any releases stemming from this request be provided to me in digital format (soft-copy) on a compact disk or other like media.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions concerning this request. Thank you. I appreciate your time and attention to this matter.

Hello.

On May 29, 2014, I submitted a request pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act for "any and all e-mails sent by Edward J Snowden using the e-mail address ejsnowdensate governanted to any and all National Security Agency officials, including officials at the Office of General Counsel, for the time period between January 1, 2014 and June 1, 2014."

On June 27, 2014 I received a letter from the National Security Agency's FOIA/Public Affairs Chief Pamela Phillips stating that no records could be located at the agency pursuant to my request because "Mr Snowden ceased to be affiliated with this Agency as a contractor in June 2013" and "e did not have an active NSA email account after that time "

I believe this to be the case, and am hereby withdrawing my FOIA request #78111 This withdrawal applies only to FOIA request #78111 and does not apply to any other FOIA requests I may have that are pending with the agency or may file in the future

Thank you for your help on this matter

The Washington Post respectfully requests a fee waiver pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(ii)(II), since the records are not being sought for a commercial use, but rather to inform the public on an issue of intense public interest and continuing controversy. If the fee waiver is denied with respect to search costs, the Post will pay reasonable duplicating fees, but requests to be notified if the cost is expected to exceed $100.

I would appreciate your communicating with me by telephone or e-mail, rather than mail, if you have questions regarding this request. I look forward to your response within 20 days as the statute requires. Thank you for your attention to this request.

Very truly yours,

JASON LEOPOLD 1669 BENEDICT CANYON DR BEVERLY HILLS CA 90210

Dear Mr. Leopold:

This responds to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request of 8 April 2014, which was received by this office on 9 April 2014, for "any and all emails written by former NSA contractor Edward Snowden in which Mr. Snowden contacted agency officials through email to raise concerns about NSA programs." As noted in our initial correspondence dated 30 April 2014, your request has been assigned Case Number 77440. For purposes of this request and based on the information you provided in your letter, you are considered a "representative of the media." There are no assessable fees for this request.

Your request has been processed under the provisions of the FOIA. A thorough search of our files was conducted, but there are no documents indicating that Mr. Snowden contacted agency officials to raise concerns about NSA programs.

The Initial Denial Authority for NSA information is the Associate Director for Policy and Records, David J. Sherman. The fact that we were unable to locate records responsive to your request may be considered by you as an adverse determination, and you are hereby advised of this Agency's appeal procedures. Any person notified of an adverse determination may file an appeal to the NSA/CSS Freedom of Information Act Appeal Authority. The appeal must be postmarked no later than 60 calendar days after the date of the initial denial letter. The appeal shall be in writing addressed to the NSA/CSS FOIA Appeal Authority (DJ4), National Security Agency, 9800 Savage Road STE 6248, Fort George G. Meade, MD 20755-6248. To aid in processing the appeal, it should reference the inability of the Agency to locate the records you seek, in sufficient detail and particularity, and the grounds upon which you believe this Agency maintains such records. The NSA/CSS FOIA Appeal Authority will endeavor to respond to the appeal within 20 working days after receipt, absent unusual circumstances.

As you may be aware, one document was located that shows that Mr. Snowden raised questions about the agency's interpretation of NSA's legal authorities. Although it is not responsive to your request since it does not discuss NSA programs or raise concerns about NSA programs, we are providing the document to you as a courtesy as it was previously released. The document can also be found posted on the IContheRecord. Tumblr.com website, as well as on NSA.gov.

Dear Mr. Keys:

As such, you are allowed 2 hours of search and 100 pages of duplication at no cost to you. There are no assessable fees for this request.

Your request has been processed under the provisions of the FOIA. We confirmed with the appropriate offices that since Mr. Snowden ceased to be affiliated with this Agency as a contractor in June 2013, he did not have an active NSA email account after that time. Dear Mr. Szoldra:

This responds to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request of 29 May 2014, which was received by this office on 30 May 2014, for "any and all email correspondence sent and received by Edward J. For purposes of this request and based on the information you provided in your letter, you are considered an "all other" requester. There are no assessable fees for this request therefore; we did not address your request for a fee waiver.

Your request has been processed under the provisions of the FOIA. One document responsive to your request is enclosed. The names of NSA/CSS employees have been deleted from the enclosure. This information is exempt from disclosure pursuant to the third exemption of the FOIA, which provides for the withholding of information specifically protected from disclosure by statute. The specific statute applicable in this case is Section 6, Public Law 86-36 (50 U.S. Code 3605).

The remaining records that this Agency maintains pertaining to Mr. Snowden, including his emails, are exempt from release in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(1), 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(3), 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(6), and 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(7).

Records pertaining to Mr. Snowden are withheld pursuant to the seventh exemption of the FOIA (5 U.S.C. Section 552(b)(7)), which protects from disclosure records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes. This includes information that, if released, could interfere with enforcement proceedings, could cause an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, could reveal the identities of confidential sources, or would reveal law enforcement techniques and procedures. All of the information maintained by this Agency relating to Mr. Snowden meets the threshold requirements for withholding under exemption 7 of the FOIA and is withheld under (b)(7)(A), (b)(7)(C), (b)(7)(D), and (b)(7)(E) of the FOIA.

The sixth exemption of the FOIA (5 U.S.C. Section 552(b)(6)) protects from disclosure information which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. In balancing the public interest for the information you request against the privacy interests involved, we have determined that the privacy interests sufficiently satisfy the requirements for the application of the (b)(6) exemption.

In addition, this Agency is authorized by statute to protect certain information concerning its activities, as well as the names of its employees. Such information is exempt from disclosure pursuant to the third exemption of the FOIA (5 U.S.C. Section 552(b)(3)), which provides for the withholding of information specifically protected from disclosure by statute. The specific statute applicable in this case is Section 6, Public Law 86-36 (50 U.S. Code 3605). We have determined that such information exists in these records, and it has been withheld accordingly. Other statutes that apply are Title 18 U.S. Code 798 and Title 50 U.S. Code 3024(i).

Some of the withheld information was also found to be currently and properly classified in accordance with Executive Order 13526. This information meets the criteria for classification as set forth in Subparagraphs (b), (c), (d) and (g) of Section 1.4 and remains classified TOP SECRET, SECRET, and CONFIDENTIAL as provided in Section 1.2 of the Executive Order. The information is classified because its disclosure could reasonably be expected to cause exceptionally grave damage to the national security. The Initial Denial Authority for NSA information is the Associate Director for Policy and Records, David J. Sherman. Since information was withheld from the enclosed document, and because the rest of your request is being denied, you are hereby advised of this Agency's appeal procedures. Any person denied access to information may file an appeal to the NSA/CSS Freedom of Information Act Appeal Authority. The appeal must be postmarked no later than 60 calendar days of the date of the initial denial letter. The appeal shall

We have determined that such information exists in these records, and it has been withheld accordingly. Other statutes that apply are Title 18 U.S. Code 798 and Title 50 U.S. Code 3024(i).

Some of the withheld information was also found to be currently and properly classified in accordance with Executive Order 13526. Email claim

Hi. Please see the below.

NSA has now explained that they have found one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The e-mail did not raise allegations or concerns about wrongdoing or abuse, but posed a legal question that the Office of General Counsel addressed. There was not additional follow-up noted. The e-mail will be released later today.

There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for additional indications of outreach from him in those areas and to date have not discovered any engagements related to his claims.

Follow-up on Snowden email release

Hi all,

Had a quick follow-up question on the Snowden email release.

Snowden claims he "reported these clearly problematic programs to more than ten distinct officials." Sounds to me like those reports could very likely have been verbal rather than written in an email.

Have you investigated whether he raised concerns verbally? Did your investigation include Snowden's contacts with officials at Dell or other contractors?

On a separate note, Snowden's supporters frequently point to the experience of Thomas Drake, William Binney and others to suggest that seeking to raise concerns of wrongdoing within internal channels can backfire in the intelligence world. Do you have any response on that point?

Follow-up on WashPo interview

Good evening, I'm following up on claims just published in the Washington Post by Snowden. According to Snowden, "Today's release is incomplete, and does not include my correspondence with the Signals Intelligence Directorate's Office of Compliance, which believed that a classified executive order could take precedence over an act of Congress, contradicting what was just published. It also did not include concerns about how indefensible collection activities - such as breaking into the back-haul communications of major US internet companies - are sometimes concealed under E.O. 12333 to avoid Congressional reporting requirements and regulations."

Does the NSA have comment on the allegation that the email exchange released today is incomplete?

Has the NSA received evidence of the alleged correspondence addressing the other concerns Snowden outlines here? If so, were these disclosures documented verbally or in writing?

Will the NSA release these emails, or other emails from Snowden, if they exist? If so, when?

Good morning! In the NBC interview last night, Mr. Williams said that the network had confirmed "with multiple sources" that before Snowden went to the press, he reported the surveillance that he believed to be problematic internally with intelligence agency supervisors. In the past, Mr. Clapper has denied this is the case. I haven't heard anyone report the NSA's side on this apparent contradiction, and I'd like to do so.

Does the NSA deny that Snowden filed concerns with intelligence agency supervisors internally, in writing, before going to the press? Why or why not?

If not, why did Mr. Clapper say so previously?

Thank you for your time.

To whom it may concern,

My name is Oliver Cox I am working with Andrea Mitchell on a spot for Nightly News TONIGHT, we are on deadline and we go to air at 6:30pm. NBC obtained a letter from Edward Snowden (Below) and we wanted to get your reaction before Nightly News. Here's Edward Snowden's letter:

"The NSA's new discovery of written contact between me and its lawyers - after more than a year of denying any such contact existed - raises serious concerns. It reveals as false the NSA's claim to Barton Gellman of the Washington Post in December of last year, that " after extensive investigation, including interviews with his former NSA supervisors and co-workers, we have not found any evidence to support Mr. Snowden's contention that he brought these matters to anyone's attention. "

Today's release is incomplete, and does not include my correspondence with the Signals Intelligence Directorate's Office of Compliance, which believed that a classified executive order could take precedence over an act of Congress, contradicting what was just published. It also did not include concerns about how indefensible collection activities - such as breaking into the back-haul communications of major US internet companies - are sometimes concealed under E.O. 12333 to avoid Congressional reporting requirements and regulations.

If the White House is interested in the whole truth, rather than the NSA's clearly tailored and incomplete leak today for a political advantage, it will require the NSA to ask my former colleagues, management, and the senior leadership team about whether I, at any time, raised concerns about the NSA's improper and at times unconstitutional surveillance activities. It will not take long to receive an answer.

Ultimately, whether my disclosures were justified does not depend on whether I raised these concerns previously. That's because the system is designed to ensure that even the most valid concerns are suppressed and ignored, not acted upon. The fact that two powerful Democratic Senators - Ron Wyden and Mark Udall - knew of mass surveillance that they believed was abusive and felt constrained to do anything about it underscores how futile such internal action is -- and will remain -- until these processes are reformed.

Still, the fact is that I did raise such concerns both verbally and in writing, and on multiple, continuing occasions - as I have always said, and as NSA has always denied. Just as when the NSA claimed it followed German laws in Germany only weeks before it was revealed that they did not, or when NSA said they did not engage in economic espionage a few short months before it was revealed they actually did so on a regular and recurring basis, or even when NSA claimed they had " no domestic spying program" right before we learned they collected the phone records of every American they could, so too are today's claims that " this is only evidence we have of him reporting concerns" false.

Now that they have finally begun producing emails, I am confident that truth will become clear rather sooner than later."

Hi, Vanee,

Long time no email. :)

Hey, Edwad Snowden has apparently challenged the NSA to deny that -- before he decided to make off with and leak secret documents -- he "contacted NSA oversight and compliance bodies directly via email" and that he "specifically expressed concerns" about the agency's "suspect interpretation of the law." This is from a Vanity Fair press release about a piece they'll be publishing this week. The magazine says Rick Ledgett told its reporters -- as VF paraphrases -- that "Snowden made no formal complaints" and that "if he complained personally to anyone, he or she has not acknowledged it." The release is here:

http://www.vanityfair.com/online/daily/2014/04/edward-snowden-interview

Snowden also apparently told the magazine that he has "zero" stolen NSA documents in his possession and that numbers that investigators have publicized are wrong -- especially the 1.7 million figure, which, he says, is "simply a scare number based on an intentionally crude metric: everything that I ever digitally interacted with in my career."

Does the NSA have a response? Do the emails Snowden mentions exist? Does the 1.7 million number simply represent everything Snowden interacted with while a contractor? Does the agency care to accept Snowden's challenge and unequivocally deny that Snowden tried legal, internal means before going the route of a leaker?

Thanks yet again for your time,

-- Edward

RE: Any response to Snowden interview?

Thanks!

Please see the item below. Also, we'll post something else soon. Please stand by.

NSA has now explained that they have found one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The e-mail did not raise allegations or concerns about wrongdoing or abuse, but posed a legal question that the Office of General Counsel addressed. There was not additional follow-up noted. The e-mail will be released later today.

There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for additional indications of outreach from him in those areas and to date have not discovered any engagements related to his claims.

Hi Vanee,

Wondering if there's any response from Intel or Chairman Rogers to last night's interview, particularly Snowden's claim that he communicated concerns to officials within the NSA before his leaks (which NBC says it has verified as accurate). He's often been criticized for not pursuing internal means before disclosing classified material. Any statement on this?

Thanks,

Dustin

Good morning. Any comment from NSA on this claim by Snowden about NSA:

"Their auditing was so poor, so negligent that any private contractor - not even an employee of the government- can walk into the NSA building, take whatever they wanted and walk out with it and they would never know."

RE: Follow-up on Snowden email release

Re: Your story today

Hi. The December statement was provided to the Washington Post in response to the writer's questions. As today's statement says: The e-mail did not raise allegations or concerns about wrongdoing or abuse, but posed a legal question that the Office of General Counsel addressed. There was not additional follow-up noted.

Excerpt from the story:

By last December, Snowden was contacting reporters, although he had not yet passed along any classified information. He continued to give his colleagues the "front-page test," he said, until April.

Asked about those conversations, NSA spokeswoman Vanee Vines sent a prepared statement to The Post: "After extensive investigation, including interviews with his former NSA supervisors and co-workers, we have not found any evidence to support Mr. Snowden's contention that he brought these matters to anyone's attention."

Snowden recounted another set of conversations that he said took place three years earlier, when he was sent by the NSA's Technology Directorate to support operations at a listening post in Japan.

Hi all.

Had a quick follow-up question on the Snowden email release.

Snowden claims he "reported these clearly problematic programs to more than ten distinct officials." Sounds to me like those reports could very likely have been verbal rather than written in an email.

Have you investigated whether he raised concerns verbally? Did your investigation include Snowden's contacts with officials at Dell or other contractors?

On a separate note, Snowden's supporters frequently point to the experience of Thomas Drake, William Binney and others to suggest that seeking to raise concerns of wrongdoing within internal channels can backfire in the intelligence world. Do you have any response on that point?

Good evening, I'm following up on claims just published in the Washington Post by Snowden. According to Snowden, "Today's release is incomplete, and does not include my correspondence with the Signals Intelligence Directorate's Office of Compliance, which believed that a classified executive order could take precedence over an act of Congress, contradicting what was just published. It also did not include concerns about how indefensible collection activities - such as breaking into the back-haul communications of major US internet companies - are sometimes concealed under E.O. 12333 to avoid Congressional reporting requirements and regulations."

Does the NSA have comment on the allegation that the email exchange released today is incomplete?

Has the NSA received evidence of the alleged correspondence addressing the other concerns Snowden outlines here? If so, were these disclosures documented verbally or in writing?

Will the NSA release these emails, or other emails from Snowden, if they exist? If so, when?

Subject: Quick question about NBC interview last night (Deadline: 2 PM EDT)

Good morning! In the NBC interview last night, Mr. Williams said that the network had confirmed "with multiple sources" that before Snowden went to the press, he reported the surveillance that he believed to be problematic internally with intelligence agency supervisors. In the past, Mr. Clapper has denied this is the case. I haven't heard anyone report the NSA's side on this apparent contradiction, and I'd like to do so.

Does the NSA deny that Snowden filed concerns with intelligence agency supervisors internally, in writing, before going to the press? Why or why not?

If not, why did Mr. Clapper say so previously?

Thank you for your time.

Best, Dana

Hi Ellen,

Understand that you were asking about the email in question from last night's NBC interview. We have the below.

NSA has now explained that they have found one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The e-mail did not raise allegations or concerns about wrongdoing or abuse, but posed a legal question that the Office of General Counsel addressed. There was not additional follow-up noted. The e-mail will be released later today.

There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for additional indications of outreach from him in those areas and to date have not discovered any engagements related to his claims.

Subject: NBC Nightly News - looking for a statement.

To whom it may concern,

My name is Oliver Cox I am working with Andrea Mitchell on a spot for Nightly News TONIGHT. we are on deadline and we go to air at 6:30pm. NBC obtained a letter from Edward Snowden (Below) and we wanted to get your reaction before Nightly News. Here's Edward Snowden's letter:

"The NSA's new discovery of written contact between me and its lawyers - after more than a year of denying any such contact existed - raises serious concerns. It reveals as false the NSA's claim to Barton Gellman of the Washington Post in December of last year, that " after extensive investigation, including interviews with his former NSA supervisors and co-workers, we have not found any evidence to support Mr. Snowden's contention that he brought these matters to anyone's attention. "

Today's release is incomplete, and does not include my correspondence with the Signals Intelligence Directorate's Office of Compliance, which believed that a classified executive order could take precedence over an act of Congress, contradicting what was just published. It also did not include concerns about how indefensible collection activities - such as breaking into the back-haul communications of major US internet companies - are sometimes concealed under E.O. 12333 to avoid Congressional reporting requirements and regulations.

If the White House is interested in the whole truth, rather than the NSA's clearly tailored and incomplete leak today for a political advantage, it will require the NSA to ask my former colleagues, management, and the senior leadership team about whether I, at any time, raised concerns about the NSA's improper and at times unconstitutional surveillance activities. It will not take long to receive an answer.

Ultimately, whether my disclosures were justified does not depend on whether I raised these concerns previously. That's because the system is designed to ensure that even the most valid concerns are suppressed and ignored, not acted upon. The fact that two powerful Democratic Senators - Ron Wyden and Mark Udall - knew of mass surveillance that they believed was abusive and felt constrained to do anything about it underscores how futile such internal action is -- and will remain -- until these processes are reformed.

Still, the fact is that I did raise such concerns both verbally and in writing, and on multiple, continuing occasions - as I have always said, and as NSA has always denied. Just as when the NSA claimed it followed German laws in Germany only weeks before it was revealed that they did not, or when NSA said they did not engage in economic espionage a few short months before it was revealed they actually did so on a regular and recurring basis, or even when NSA claimed they had " no domestic spying program" right before we learned they collected the phone records of every American they could, so too are today's claims that " this is only evidence we have of him reporting concerns" false.

Now that they have finally begun producing emails, I am confident that truth will become clear rather sooner than later."

NSA has now explained that they have found one e-mail inquiry by Edward Snowden to the Office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The e-mail did not raise allegations or concerns about wrongdoing or abuse, but posed a legal question that the Office of General Counsel addressed. There was not additional follow-up noted. The e-mail will be released later today.

There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for additional indications of outreach from him in those areas and to date have not discovered any engagements related to his claims.

Hi.

We have the below in response to your query.

NSA has now explained that they have found one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The e-mail did not raise allegations or concerns about wrongdoing or abuse, but posed a legal question that the Office of General Counsel addressed. There was not additional follow-up noted. The e-mail will be released later today.

There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for additional indications of outreach from him in those areas and to date have not discovered any engagements related to his claims.

Subject: Quick question about NBC interview last night (Deadline: 2 PM EDT)

Good morning! In the NBC interview last night, Mr. Williams said that the network had confirmed "with multiple sources" that before Snowden went to the press, he reported the surveillance that he believed to be problematic internally with intelligence agency supervisors. In the past, Mr. Clapper has denied this is the case. I haven't heard anyone report the NSA's side on this apparent contradiction, and I'd like to do so.

Does the NSA deny that Snowden filed concerns with intelligence agency supervisors internally, in writing, before going to the press? Why or why not?

If not, why did Mr. Clapper say so previously?

Thank you for your time.

Best, Dana

Hi. Given the ongoing federal investigation, we cannot comment on many of the issues that you raised. Below are some of your questions and a few citations/responses that you and your research assistant may want to review. Thanks!

Q: Snowden claimed in his June 9 video for the Guardian that he could do the following: "sitting at my desk I certainly had the authority to wiretap anyone, from you or your accountant to a Federal judge to even the President if I had a personal e-mail. Question: Did he have the authority to tap the a) the President of the US b) a Federal judge 3) anyone at all?

Mr. Ledgett responded to this allegation in the May 2014 Vanity Fair story.

Q: In same video, Snowden says "I witnessed systemic violations of law by my government that created a moral duty to act." Question: Did Snowden ever report a violation of the law to the IG or anyone else?

In May we released the statement below; the email can be found on nsa.gov.

"NSA has now explained that they have found one e-mail inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of the General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The e-mail did not raise allegations or concerns about wrongdoing or abuse, but posed a legal question that the Office of the General Counsel addressed. There was not additional follow-up noted. Dear Public Affairs Officer

I am writing an article for the Wall Street Journal on the creditability of Edward Snowden. My deadline is August 21, 2013 It was be the third of a series.. My last two pieces in WSJ can be found:

What I am trying to clarify is the various claims made by Snowden. I realize the NSA has already addressed some of my questions in the past, but as over a year has gone by, I would like to answer then anew. It might also be helpful to speak on the telephone. My phone number is ______ Any such conversation, if you prefer, can be off-the record. Below are my questions. I tried to be as specific as possible. Please feel free to point out anything I may have missed, SPECIFIC QUESTIONS

- 1. Snowden claimed in his June 9 video for the Guardian that he could do the following: "
  "sitting at my desk I certainly had the authority to wiretap anyone, from you or your accountant to a Federal judge to even the President if I had a personal e-mail.
  Question: Did he have the authority to tap the a) the President of the US b) a Federal judge
  3) anyone at all?
- 2. If he, or anyone else, did not have such authority, would it be a crime at the NSA to hack into the phone of the President or a Federal Judge.

3. In same video, Snowden claims he worked under "cover" for NSA.

Question: Was he ever directly employed by the NSA as opposed to an outside contractor? Does working for an outside contractor such as Dell or Booz Allen Hamilton [BAH], constitute working under "cover."

- 4. In same video, Snowden says he was a " senior adviser for the Central Intelligence Agency." Was he a senior advisor to the CIA?
- 5. In same video, Snowden says "I witnessed systemic violations of law by my government that created a moral duty to act."

Question: Did Snowden ever report a violation of the law to the IG or anyone else?

6. Snowden signed Standard Form 312, the ?classified-information non-disclosure agreement-with BAH.

Question: Did he sign a similar classified-information non-disclosure agreement with the NSA? 7. Snowden said in an interview with Barton Gellman in the Washington Post on 12/23/13 that he brought his misgivings to two superiors in the NSA's Technology Directorate and two more in the NSA Threat Operations Center's regional base in Hawaii in Oct 2012.

Question: Is this true, according to your investigation?

Question: Did Snowden work for the Technology Directorate in 2012?

Question Did Snowden work for NTOC in 2012?

8. In same Gellman interview, he Snowden says opened a data query tool called BOUNDLESS INFORMANT, to show extent of NSA interceptions, for the 2 employees at the NTOC, his 2 superiors at the Technology Directorate, and 15 other people at the NSA in 2012.

Question: Were any of these putative 19 people found by the NSA? Question: Was Snowden in a position to open this file in 2012?

9. In same Gellman interview, Snowden says in 2009 he was sent by the NSA's Technology Directorate to support operations at a listening post in Japan as a system administrator and pointed out serious flaws with information security first to his supervisor in Japan and then to the directorate's chief of operations in the Pacific.

Question: was Snowden sent to Japan by the NSA's Technological Division in 2009- or, if he was sent by Dell, did he work for that Division in 2009?

Question" What he working at NSA as a system administrator in 2009?

Question: Is there any record of Snowden pointing out flaws to his supervisor or the directorate's chief of operations?

10. Snowden claims in an interview with James Risen in the New York Times on 10/18/13 that he decided to act when he discovered a copy of a classified 2009 inspector general's report on the N.S.A.'s warrantless wiretapping program through a "dirty word search," which he described as an effort by a systems administrator to check a computer system for things that should not be there in order to delete them and sanitize the system.

Question: Did Snowden in his positions at Dell have the authority to perform such a search? Question: If Dell found a document as he described. Did he have the authority (or even the ability) to open it in as an unencrypted document?

11. Snowden, after he switched from Dell to BAH in March, took an orientation course in Maryland in April 2013.

Question. Did Snowden sign a non-disclosure agreement with the NSA?

Did Snowden provide any untrue information in order to complete his training? 12. Snowden reportedly informed BAH in late April that he needed to take a medical leave in May.

Question: Did Snowden also report to the NSA he would be taking a medical leave? If so, did he specify either where he was going for treatment or when he would be returning to Hawaii?

Thank you so much for kindly considering this request as ever Edward Jay Epstein

- 9. In same Gellman interview, Snowden says in 2009 he was sent by the NSA's Technology Directorate to support operations at a listening post in Japan as a system administrator and pointed out serious flaws with information security first to his supervisor in Japan and then to the directorate's chief of operations in the Pacific.

Question: was Snowden sent to Japan by the NSA's Technological Division in 2009- or, if he was sent by Dell, did he work for that Division in 2009?

Question" What he working at NSA as a system administrator in 2009?

Question: Is there any record of Snowden pointing out flaws to his supervisor or the directorate's chief of operations?

10. Snowden claims in an interview with James Risen in the New York Times on 10/18/13 that he decided to act when he discovered a copy of a classified 2009 inspector general's report on the N.S.A.'s warrantless wiretapping program through a "dirty word search," which he described as an effort by a systems administrator to check a computer system for things that should not be there in order to delete them and sanitize the system.

Question: Did Snowden in his positions at Dell have the authority to perform such a search? Question: If Dell found a document as he described. Did he have the authority (or even the ability) to open it in as an unencrypted document?

11. Snowden, after he switched from Dell to BAH in March, took an orientation course in Maryland in April 2013.

Question. Did Snowden sign a non-disclosure agreement with the NSA?

Did Snowden provide any untrue information in order to complete his training? 12. Snowden reportedly informed BAH in late April that he needed to take a medical leave in May.

Question: Did Snowden also report to the NSA he would be taking a medical leave? If so, did he specify either where he was going for treatment or when he would be returning to Hawaii?

Thank you so much for kindly considering this request as ever Edward Jay Epstein

There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for additional indications of outreach from him in those areas and to date have not discovered any engagements related to his claims.

RE: Snowden email

Hi. The statement was provided to the Washington Post in response to the writer's questions.

Excerpt from the story:

By last December, Snowden was contacting reporters, although he had not yet passed along any classified information. He continued to give his colleagues the "front-page test," he said, until April.

Asked about those conversations, NSA spokeswoman Vanee Vines sent a prepared statement to The Post: "After extensive investigation, including interviews with his former NSA supervisors and co-workers, we have not found any evidence to support Mr. Snowden's contention that he brought these matters to anyone's attention."

Snowden recounted another set of conversations that he said took place three years earlier, when he was sent by the NSA's Technology Directorate to support operations at a listening post in Japan.

I understand that the NSA is planning to release today the email that Edward Snowden says he sent to the NSA Office of Legal Counsel raising concerns about its legal interpretations for NSA spy programs.

I'd like to receive the email and speak with someone there to get more information about it, when someone is available.

Hi Siobhan,

Separate from your questions but see the below regarding the email claim.

NSA has now explained that they have found one email inquiry by Edward Snowden to the office of General Counsel asking for an explanation of some material that was in a training course he had just completed. The e-mail did not raise allegations or concerns about wrongdoing or abuse, but posed a legal question that the Office of General Counsel addressed. There was not additional follow-up noted. The e-mail will be released later today.

There are numerous avenues that Mr. Snowden could have used to raise other concerns or whistleblower allegations. We have searched for additional indications of outreach from him in those areas and to date have not discovered any engagements related to his claims.

Hi Vanee,

I realize it's a bit difficult to gauge because only bits of this NBC interview with Snowden have been released, but seeking any reax you have to his discussion about his role working as a contractor for NSA? He's pushing back on what he sees as a government effort to downplay his responsibilities. I understand DIA is issuing a denial, so we wanted to check in with the other agencies he's said he's worked for/with.

Thanks, Siobhan

nsapao Snowden complaint?

Good morning

In the interview with NBC last night, Edward Snowden said that he had filed formal complaints about his work up the chain of the agency, and NBC claims that there is at least one email that seems to confirm that. According to their reporting, he asked a question about how the agency had interpreted the law. Is that correct? Does that disprove the NSA's earlier claim that he had never brought the matters to anyone's attention?

Thank you

I understand that the NSA is planning to release today the email that Edward Snowden says he sent to the NSA Office of Legal Counsel raising concerns about its legal interpretations for NSA spy programs.

I'd like to receive the email and speak with someone there to get more information about it, when someone is available.
