EXERCISE Impression 12/9/86

Along with initial objectives of using foreign materials to stimulate ^{player} thinking about planning for language barriers in future real world incidents, the encounter with the foreign language barrier as a player entered into this exercise at the border immediately conditioned the player to accept a role in playing the game. In other words, the mental transition from real world to the partial make believe exercise world was enhanced by the foreign speaking actors. Without this many individuals may not have been able to whole-heartedly enter into play.
